YWCA ceiling falls; woman dies

Half the ceiling over the Long Beach YWCA swimming pool collapsed suddenly Friday evening, killing a young mother and injuring four swimmers at the weekly recreational swim night.

The wooden false roof, installed about eight years ago, fell in a heap on the shallow end of the pool, covering several paddlers and instantly killing Mrs. Jo Spinelli, 28, 120 Esperanza Drive.

Her husband, John, 53, and her daughter, Linda, 5, were treated for minor injuries at St. Mary Medical Center and released. Also treated at St. Mary and released were Mrs. Sarah Gibson, 57, of Long Beach; Cho Kumye, 18, a relative of Mrs. Spinelli, and Peter Tolton, 12, 6151 Cherry Ave.

The ceiling of the "Y" at 550 Pacific Ave. collapsed so suddenly that few swimmers had time to respond to the danger, according to witnesses. However, lifeguard Doreen Koehler, 18, said she heard a crackling, rumbling noise that sounded like an earthquake and yelled "Get under the water!" Then she dove in and helped pull several swimmers to the side.

Two 12-year-olds, regular Friday night swimmers, were trapped under heavy wood panels but clawed and kicked their way to freedom.

Peter Tolton, 6151 Cherry Ave., said he had just submerged, wearing a face mask, when he was hit on the back and saw an arm around his neck. He said: "I looked up and there was no light. I breathed through my mask and pushed this lady over to the side. She was OK. I was scared."

George Shuman, of 464 Adair St., Peter's companion, also was trapped under the falling debris and had his arm pinned by a heavy board. He pulled free, however, and, along with Peter, nursed cuts and scrapes.

The building, erected in 1925, fails to comply with current city earthquake codes, according to the City Building Department.

Only about 15 swimmers were there Friday; last week there were more than 40.

The accident drew rescue units from the Long Beach Fire Department, Police Department and four city lifeguards, who made frequent dives before the pool was emptied and firemen hacked their way through the timbers and metal girders.

YWCA Executive Director Astrid Simsarian, who arrived shortly after the accident to survey the scene, exclaimed: "It's unbelievable. I feel such a personal tragedy for the woman who died. The place has been inspected regularly by the Building Department since I've been here. We had no idea there was anything amiss. I can't say what we'll do, but I would doubt if it will be repaired."

A coroner's deputy, who arrived shortly after the accident, said he felt the collapse was caused by a structural defect. "All the humidity in here could eventually erode the false ceiling," he suggested.

Cancer rise tied to environment

By JEFFREY ANTEVIL
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—The incidence of cancer in the United States has more than doubled since 1900, and there has been almost no improvement in survival rates in the past 25 years, the President's Council on Environmental Quality reported Friday.

In a massive and far-reaching study on ecology, energy, population trends and other issues, the council cited estimates that between 80 and 90 per cent of all cancer is related to environmental factors, many of them man-made.

It said thousands of chemical compounds are added each year to the 2 million already known. Little is known about many of the new ones which are introduced into the environment, but it is likely that many are contributing to cancer and other human ailments, the council said.

It said most cancer-causing agents (carcinogens) in the environment are found in the workplace. Although there usually is a 15 to 40-year lag between cause and effect, it said, there is no indication that long-term exposure to carcinogens is necessary to produce cancer and even "a single exposure to a chemical" may do so.

The council said the huge jump in mortality caused by cancer and heart disease—which increased from 12 per cent of all deaths in 1900 to more than half now—accounted for the virtual leveling off of the average American's life span, despite a decline in infant deaths and continuing medical advances in many fields.

In a message to Congress accompanying the report, President Ford emphasized its conclusion that efforts to clean up the nation's polluted air and water were producing "encouraging results."

Rejecting claims that environmental progress is in conflict with a strong economy and an adequate energy supply, Ford said the country must insure that new energy sources and technologies "meet environmental standards."

The 763-page report said air quality had improved "greatly" in the past five years and action against water pollution has shown progress. Nevertheless, it said the national water pollution control program is behind schedule, and large polluters such as industry and municipalities probably will need additional time to meet federal guidelines.

risen over the previous five months combined. It was the steepest rise since the 2.5 per cent jump in July.

The trade account, meanwhile, showed a $72.6 million deficit, marking the first time imports have exceeded exports since last January's $262.1 million deficit. The latest deficit followed a surplus of $724.2 million in December and $11.06 billion surplus for all of 1975.

and phase of expansion.

The initial recovery was primarily the product of consumer spending stimulated by federal tax cuts and rebates. The latest statistics reinforced earlier indications of a possible upswing in business spending and investment.

The department said its composite index of a dozen individual economic indicators climbed by 2.2 per cent in January, or more than the 2.1 per cent it had ering, growing domestic economy where consumers are now buying imported goods faster than U.S. business is selling goods abroad.

The U.S. recovery, after a strong spurt last spring in rebounding from the recession, leveled off in late summer and early winter. But the performance of the composite index was a hopeful sign that the recovery has now established a solid base and is ready for the sec-

Hero object of gang abuse

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

In the days of the Hardy Boys heroism brought esteem. For 10-year-old Leon President it's meant death threats and beatings.

Leon has received a Los Angeles Police Commission citation and a pair of real handcuffs for helping to capture a juvenile bandit suspect last fall with a pair of toy cuffs.

But his mother, Kathy President, said Friday she is sending her son to live with his father in another city for his own protection.

"IT'S MOSTLY the teen-age gangs," she said. "It's not too good. The best thing is to send him somewhere until things cool off."

Mrs. President said Leon has been beaten and threatened with death by the gangs in Hollywood. He is now escorted to and from school by her 19-year-old stepson, she said.

"He's not afraid of them," she said. "He just wishes they'd leave him alone. A lot of pressure's been on him and it will be good for him to get away." It began last September when Leon became suspicious of the sudden affluence of four neighborhood friends. He knew that several elderly residents of a Hollywood apartment house had been burglarized recently.

HE ASKED his friends about it and they offered him $11 to keep his mouth shut. He took the money to the Hollywood police station and accompanied officers to an address where two boys, 10 and 11, were arrested. Then to another address where a 12-year-old girl was arrested.

A 12-year-old boy tried to escape officers, but Leon yanked him off a bicycle bought with stolen loot and manacled him with his toy handcuffs.

Leon is only 4-feet-6 and weighs 90 pounds. The boy he captured was 8 inches taller and 35 pounds heavier. Leon said it was nothing.

LEON PRESIDENT, 10, is hugged by his mother after receiving a citation for heroism Thursday. But since his good deed last fall, he has been beaten and threatened with death.

Panel will ask lower cut in tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee agreed Friday to recommend a tax cut of no more than $20.6 billion in 1977 — $8.5 billion below what President Ford proposed.

Ending a week of work on its spending and tax plans for next year, the committee agreed with its chairman, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., that the $8.5 billion would be better "spent" on social programs than on tax cuts.

ACTUALLY, the $8.5 billion exists only as a figure in Ford's budget. The committee actions mean that the money would be used to reduce the federal deficit — which the committee would increase by $8.5 billion to pay for the social programs.

The net effect: —Congress could not be accused in an election year of adding to the record high federal deficit. The Finance Committee proposal contemplates the same $45.9-billion deficit as does Ford's amended budget.

Patty meeting with Weather leader told

By RONALD KOZIOL
Knight News Service

SAN FRANCISCO—Patricia Hearst, presently on trial for bank robbery charges here, has told of meeting a top leader of the violent Weather Underground after her cross-country flight in 1974, the Knight News Service learned Friday.

Miss Hearst's disclosure of the meeting with Kathy Boudin in a New York City apartment in mid-June 1974 was the first confirmed connection between the Weather Underground and the Symbionese Liberation Army, the tiny guerrilla band that kidnapped the college co-ed and allegedly forced her into the life of a revolutionary.

Federal sources, as well as others close to Miss Hearst's defense team, have confirmed that the 22-year-old heiress has told of meeting Miss Boudin, sought since 1970 for a series of terrorist activities in New York City and Chicago.

Miss Boudin, 32, is considered by authorities to be one of the top five leaders of the Weather group, which went underground in early 1970 and embarked on a wave of bombings aimed mostly at government facilities across the country.

The meeting is reported to have taken place in the Upper West Side apartment of sports activist Jack Scott, who was aiding Miss Hearst and SLA members William Harris, and his wife, Emily, in preparing a book.

During her recent court testimony, Miss Hearst told of being taken by car by Scott from Berkeley to his New York City apartment, where she spent two days before being moved to a farmhouse hideout in New Canaan, Pa.

It was at the apartment that she also met for the first time Wendy Yoshi-

Patty not converted by SLA, doctor says

By THEO WILSON
Knight News Service

SAN FRANCISCO—Patricia Hearst was "never a convert" of the Symbionese Liberation Army, and when she raised her fist in the guerrilla salute after her capture it was her "last gasp of compliance and profound confusion," Dr. Robert Jay Lifton testified for her defense Friday.

Lifton, billed as an expert on persuasive coercion and thought control, said that from the moment the young heiress was kidnapped she became a victim of the same terrifying controls that reduced hundreds of Americans and Europeans in Red Chinese prison camps to completely "compliant" subjects.

"IF CAPTORS are sufficiently motivated, they can break down anyone," the psychiatrist told jurors in the bank-robbery trial. He said Miss Hearst, kidnapped at 19, "not yet formed as an adult, vulnerable to every kind of fear," was more susceptible to coercion than any of the hundreds of persons he has studied in the last 26 years.

Lifton, who told the jurors Patty remained a "coerced" captive of William and Emily Harris after the rest of the SLA was killed, revealed in cross-examination later that the defendant had been in Sacramento sometime between the fall of 1974 and her arrest last September.

It was the first time the jurors heard that Patty had been in Sacramento during the "missing year" in her life with the Harrises. She took the Fifth Amendment 42 times to prevent questioning about that period, since she is under investigation for a Sacramento bank robbery last April in which a woman customer was killed.

THE psychiatrist told Asst. U.S. Atty. David Bancroft that he asked her about her everyday activities and she told him about "military drills, self-criticism sessions and physical activities."

"She told me about her encounters with Wendy

Yoshimura, which began in the East and continued in Sacramento and the Bay Area," Lifton said. "Also about her 'struggle' sessions with the Harrises, when there was supposed to be mutual criticism, but she was always under attack." Miss Yoshimura was arrested with Patty at the apartment they shared here.

Lifton also revealed that Miss Yoshimura, who had been a fugitive for three years on charges unrelated to the Hearst case, had written to her parents, and when Bill Harris wanted her to stop, wrote the letters in Japanese. Patty

Shale oil plan held harmful

WASHINGTON — A government report said Friday that squeezing oil from shale and synthetic fuels from coal will probably do more environmental damage than established means of supplying the country with fuel. The President's Council on Environmental Quality said drilling, piping and refining oil "is less polluting than shale oil and liquids from coal." President Ford has strongly supported private development of shale oil and synthetic fuels by proposing up to $6 billion in federal guarantees for companies interested in taking the risk. The council's report marks a low-key break with administration policy, by saying it might be better to find new and improved ways of drilling for oil.

Attica dismissal

BUFFALO, N.Y. — After four years of investigation and prosecution, the criminal cases stemming from the bloody 1971 Attica prison revolt came to a virtual close Friday when a judge threw out charges against five men. Only one case remains unresolved. Justice Carman Ball of State Supreme Court said he reluctantly agreed to a recommendation by the

20,000 flee Angola war

KINSHASA, Zaire — Between 15,000 and 20,000 refugees including white Portuguese settlers fled Angola to southern Zaire in the past month as Soviet-backed forces of the Popular Movement (MPLA) swept up to Zaire's border, government officials said Friday. A senior official in Matadi, in southwestern Zaire, said 11,000 of those who fled Angola did so between Feb. 15 and 24, when the MPLA offensive was at its height. Half the refugees were peasants and the remainder were traders and local officials together with their wives and children, the official said. Although the majority came from northern Angola, some had trekked hundreds of miles from central and even southern Angola where the MPLA has ousted pro-Western factions from all major towns.

U.S. bombing claimed

BANGKOK, Thailand — Cambodia charged Friday that U.S. warplanes bombed Siem Reap in northwestern Cambodia two days ago, killing 15 persons and wounding 40 others. The Cambodian report, broadcast Friday by the Phnom Penh radio station and monitored here, said that two separate attacks by what were described as F3 jets occurred in the morning and afternoon of Feb. 25 on Siem Reap and its airport, the planes turning north toward Thailand after they had allegedly dropped their bombs. It was believed that the planes to which the Cambodian broadcast referred were F111 jets whose figures could be mistaken for the Roman numeral three. A number of these planes were stationed at airbases in Thailand during the Vietnam war and used for air strikes over Indochina. But American and Thai officials said that the last American warplanes left Thailand last December.

China wheat deal

OTTAWA — China has signed an agreement in Peking to purchase $150 million worth of Canadian wheat, Transport Minister Otto Lang announced Friday. He said China bought 35.4 million bushels — 950,000 tons — under the fourth wheat contract signed by the Chinese since a three-year agreement was reached in October 1973. The contract brings total Chinese purchases in the period to 182 million bushels. It calls for shipment between April and December. Strong sales have reduced Canada's reserves of wheat from 290 million bushels last July 31 to a current 125 million bushels.

Worker claims he's kidnaped Lindbergh son

Combined News Services
A New England factory worker claiming to be the kidnaped son of Charles A. Lindbergh has asked a Hawaii court to name him an heir to the famed aviator's estate.
Lawyers for Kenneth Kerwin filed suit this week in U.S. Circuit Court on Maui Island, where Lindbergh died in 1974 and where his estate is in probate. A hearing is scheduled March 9 on a motion to move the case to Honolulu.
Kerwin's lawyers refused to disclose his whereabouts, saying only that he lived in the Northeastern United States. Reporters in Maine discovered that he works for a sportswear company in Springvale, Maine, but he is now vacationing at an undisclosed spot.
Kerwin's suit maintains that he is Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. and was kidnaped in 1932 by a family

Mussolini

Thieves raided the chapel tomb of Fascist dictator Benito Mussolini early Friday and stole a small urn containing a piece of his brain, police in the northern Italian hill village of Predappio said.
The theft came 10 years after Mussolini's wife Rachele, now 86, won a 20-year fight to have the brain fragment returned from a U.S. Army hospital in Washington where it was studied by psychiatrists.

Confiscated

Chicago police have confiscated a 1973 black luxury automobile belonging to "Welfare Queen" Linda Taylor.
Police seized the car Friday under an Illinois law which permits confiscation of a motor vehicle believed used in committing a crime.
Mrs. Taylor was charged Wednesday with burglary for allegedly removing $800 worth of goods — including a fur coat, television, diamond ring and kitchen appliances from her old to her new home. She is also awaiting trial on charges of defrauding the state out of $7,000 in public aid funds, and has been charged with child neglect of her two sons — Willie, 7 and Jose, 5 — who have been placed with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.
She also faces an April 1 circuit court appearance on charges of perjury and theft in connection with alleged welfare fraud.

Mail cuts hit

WASHINGTON — Some members of Congress and leaders of postal unions said Friday that the country would not accept a cutback in mail delivery to three days a week. Three-day-a-week delivery is among the options open to the deficit-plagued Postal Service in its campaign to cut costs. J. T. Ellington, a senior assistant postmaster general, disclosed in an interview. Ellington said "our most immediate option" is eliminating delivery on Saturday or one other day of the week. Postal officials had previously said they were considering such a move. Eliminating delivery on Saturday would save $350 million per year and the savings would be somewhat higher if delivery were dropped on a business day.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the theft, but authorities theorized the raiders either were leftist extremists who wanted to deface the tomb or were simply souvenir hunters.

Police said the raid on the tomb was the most damaging since Mussolini was buried there in 1957, the only one of the World War II Axis leaders to have a tomb. They said that in addition to stealing the brain fragment, the thieves smashed glass display cases around the tomb and stole several of Mussolini's military hats.
In 1971, an explosive device blew down the chapel's gate and damaged the ceiling.

Steve Wallenda, a member of the famous Wallenda highwire family, was being treated for blood clots on the brain Friday at Bernalillo County Medical Center in Albuquerque, N.M.

Kidnaped

The 8-year-old son of well-to-do Houston salesman was kidnaped Friday and held for a $1 million ransom until he escaped from the locked car trunk where he was held eight hours, police said.

Authorities said a man was arrested in the abduction.
Colin Kerr, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Kerr, was kidnaped about noon while fishing with some boys near his home in Friendswood, an upper middle class community near Houston. The father is a salesman for a nuts and bolts manufacturer.
Friendswood police said the abductor had demanded $1 million in cash for the safe return of the boy. But police said young Kerr escaped from the trunk of a car while the automobile was parked at a drive-in grocery store. They said a man was arrested in some bushes at a park on the city's southwest side.

Relatives said Wallenda, 26, had complained of headaches and loss of memory since being struck by a car three weeks ago in Las Vegas.

His half brother, Jimmy Christner, said, "Doctors are going to give him a drug to prevent blackouts, but it's going to mess up his balance. The doctor said if he goes on the wire again he would probably fall off."

Christner said Wallenda injured his neck and back four years ago in a fall from a tightrope. He said a year ago Wallenda received head injuries while practicing acrobatic stunts.

Liaison

Thomas S. Gates, the last secretary of Defense in the Eisenhower administration, will be named shortly by President Ford to head the U.S. liaison office in Peking, government sources said Friday night in Washington.

Gates, who will be 70 in April, will take over from George Bush, who now heads the Central Intelligence Agency. The only other liaison chief since an accommodation was reached with the People's Republic of China was David Bruce, a veteran diplomat who is now retired from the foreign service.

Gates, an investment banker, served for seven years in high-level defense positions under the late President Eisenhower, including those of secretary of the Navy and, beginning in December 1959, secretary of Defense.

Embarrassed

The Arena Stage Company of Washington has won a Broadway Tony award but may not get it during a national television show because of sponsor embarrassment over premature leak of the news.

The special award for distinguished work is the first ever given a resident troupe outside New York. The 25-year-old organization was picked for the honor by the American Theatre Critics' Association cooperating with the League of New York Theatres and Producers which makes the annual awards.

Announcement of the Arena Stage citation was to have been made after nominations in 16 competitive categories are disclosed on March 24. Alternate winners are to be revealed during a two-hour telecast April 18.

A member of the Critics' Association disclosed the award in the London Times, however, with ensuing pickup of the item by Washington papers. Alexander Cohen, producer of the program for the league, said that as a result it was now "very marginal" whether the actual presentation would be done on the air.

B. J. Thomas, the singer who recorded the 1970 hit "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," has petitioned for bankruptcy in federal court in Dallas.

The petition filed with the court Thursday did not mention Thomas' current assets and liabilities, but his lawyer, James Pleasant, said that information would follow within 10 days.

Thomas' other top recordings included "Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song," "Rock and Roll Lullaby" and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

Weil, who died a welfare patient in a convalescent home Thursday at the age of 100, had only $196.

The Yellow Kid, who once said he spent all his money as a high-living traveler, was buried in a wooden casket covered with grey cloth at the Archer Woods Memorial Park in the Chicago suburb of Willow Springs. The park agreed to bury him for $150.

Carter sees boomerang in rivals' attacks

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

BOSTON (AP)—Jimmy Carter, suddenly the Democrat to beat in the presidential primaries, said Friday the attacks of his Massachusetts campaign rivals may boomerang because voters are fed up with bickering, squabbling politicians.

"I don't believe that the nation appreciates personal animosities and attacks permitted for their mortgage interest payments.

"Sen. Jackson's statement was a gross distortion....," Carter countered. The former Georgia governor said he wouldn't do anything to increase the tax burden on homeowners but would as president consider the elimination of all special exemptions except possibly that for charitable contributions.

"I intend to eliminate as many as I can as a comprehensive, overall tax reform package....," Carter said. He said that would mean a decrease, not an increase, in the federal taxes paid by the average American. But he also said his detailed proposal is not yet completed. He said he would come out with a full plan later this year.

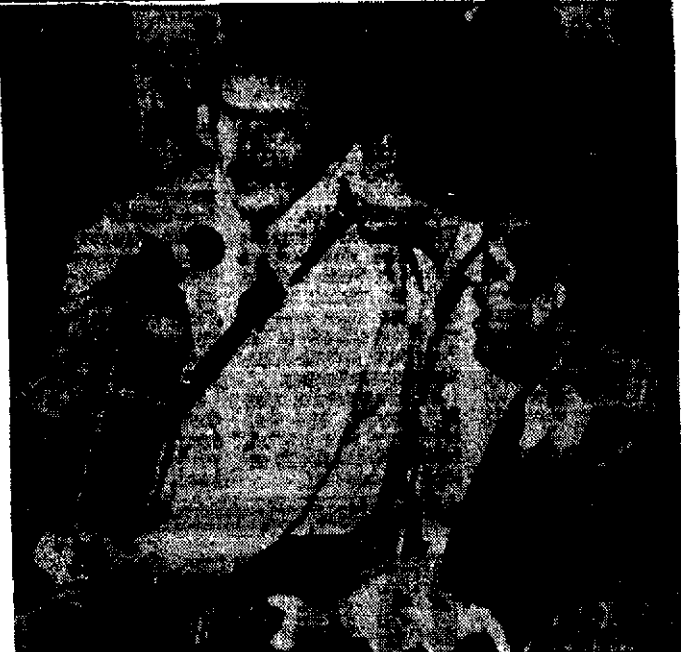

Udall said there would be a taxpayer rebellion if the interest deduction were repealed, something Congress surely would block anyhow.

The Arizona congressman, who ran second in New Hampshire with 24 per cent, denied in an interview with the Lowell Sun that he was part of any concerted stop-Carter movement.

Bayh said the same thing. "I don't believe in cabals," he said.

Carter said the criticism was testament to his emergence atop the Democratic field. He said he is not going to retaliate with any attack on the "character or ability of my opponents.... They're all good men," he said. He sounded the same theme at Salem State College.

"I don't intend to get involved in personal, back-and-forth squabbling with other candidates," he said.

Campaign note

While the Democrats made their campaign rounds, there was a short-lived strike threat by municipal employees upset over threatened layoffs that could have disrupted the Boston balloting. But a union lawyer said the dispute was settled Friday night.

Other political developments Friday included:

—Ford was endorsed by 11 former Republican national chairmen. The declaration of support came after eight of the chairmen had breakfast with Ford at the White House.

"We're all for Mr. Ford in 1976," said William Miller, the party's 1964 vice presidential nominee. He said there are 12 "living and breathing" GOP national committee chairmen and "11 are united in their support of President Ford for the nomination of our party and for the election in November."

—Ford prepared to fly to Miami today and spend the weekend campaigning in Florida.

—Republican presidential contender Ronald Reagan said he doubts very much if Ford would consider the vice presidential slot on the GOP ticket.

"It's impossible for me to believe he would go from President to vice president," Reagan told about 700 people at a retirement community near Tampa, Fla.

During an interview Thursday, Ford said it was possible that Reagan, among other Republicans, might be chosen as his running mate if Ford wins the nomination.

Friday, Reagan ruled out a chance of taking a vice presidential spot on a ticket headed by Ford. "I'm not interested," he said.

—Carter is expected to maintain a slight edge when Oklahoma Democrats hold county caucuses today to elect delegates to the congressional district conventions.

More than 7,000 Oklahoma Democrats will gather at 78 county conventions to determine whether Carter can maintain the slight advantage he earned over former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris at the precinct conventions on Feb. 7.

—Party officials in South Carolina say the Democratic precinct caucuses today could result in a three-way tie for delegates between Alabama Gov. George Wallace, Carter and those uncommitted.

Most estimates are that about 40 per cent of the delegates chosen in the precincts for the 46 county conventions on March 8 will be uncommitted, with a close split between Carter and Wallace for the other 60 per cent.

—Wallace, considered the frontrunner in Florida, attended a Fort Lauderdale rally.

—Democratic contender Milton Shapp met with Florida millionaire John D. McArthur in Palm Beach Shores.

"We talked about fundamentals of business, and applying them to government," said McArthur, praising the Pennsylvania governor for his business experience.

Congress gets time to rebuild election panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Friday gave Congress an additional 20 days to rebuild the Federal Election Commission in a decision that at least temporarily keeps the federal campaign-funds spigot turned on for presidential candidates.

Many of the commission's powers, including the authority to certify government campaign funds and interpret the new election law, were due to expire Sunday night under terms of a Supreme Court decision issued Jan. 30.

The court gave Congress 30 days in which to reconstitute the commission, but legislation has been subjected to a barrage of proposals to change various features of the campaign law.

would veto any bill that would create confusion and bring on new litigation.

He said if the law isn't changed, "the watchdog will have lost its teeth. We must not retreat from our commitment to clean elections."

The problem the Supreme Court found with the commission was that its six members were not appointed in a manner constitutionally compatible with their duties. Four were appointed by Congress and two others by the President with consent of both the House and Senate required.

Because some of their duties were administrative, the court said this form of appointment violated the separation of powers concept of the constitution.

argued, did not participate in the decision.

An FEC spokesman said commissioners were pleased to be able to continue operating and to keep the matching funds moving.

John Gardner, head of Common Cause, expressed pleasure at the delay despite it being shorter than requested. Sen. James Buckley, Cons.-R.-N.Y., one of the plaintiffs in the original suit against the election law, did not object to the new delay.

IN ITS Jan. 30 ruling, the court held that government subsidies for presidential campaigns and limits on campaign contributions are constitutional. It struck down most limits on campaign spending except for candidates accepting federal matching funds.

Even if Congress does nothing to amend the law, however, the commission would continue in existence to perform duties okayed by the court, including various record-keeping, audit and information functions.

PLANS TO reconstitute the commission would make all six members presidential appointees.

But other proposals would add federal financing of congressional elections to the law and narrow the commission's authority to interpret the election statute.

The court voted 7 to 1 to grant the extra 20 days with only Justice Harry Blackmun in opposition. Justice John Paul Stevens, not a member of the court when the case was first

No debriefing by Kissinger

Nixon silent on trip critics

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

KWEILIN, China — Former President Nixon "definitely will not respond to the criticism" of his China trip that has come from the United States, an aide said Friday.

The aide, John Brennan, would not elaborate on Nixon's stand regarding domestic criticism and declined to discuss specific critical statements, which have come from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and President Ford, among others.

On Thursday Ford told a Washington interviewer who asked about the effect of the Nixon trip on the New Hampshire primary, where the President took 51 per cent of the vote over GOP challenger Ronald Reagan:

"I think the weight of the evidence we have so far — we don't have all the evidence in — that it probably was harmful, but I wouldn't want to make that comment at this time."

On Friday Nixon cruised 50 miles down the Li River past spectacular mountains that he repeatedly compared to pyramids. In the evening he attended a recital of songs, dances and acrobatics in Kweilin.

Today the Nixons fly to Canton, where they will visit a commune and the hot springs. They depart Sunday for home.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who recently said Nixon would report to the White House on his China trip after his return, told reporters in Washington: "Former President Nixon will definitely be debriefed when he comes back, but it will not be by me."

Kissinger also said he did not expect to see Nixon in California.

One of the things Nixon is expected to tell U.S. officials in his debriefing is his impression of the current split in the Peking hierarchy between leftist radicals and the moderates they are attacking.

IN PEKING a poster campaign describing Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping as China's "foremost capitalist roadster" began Thursday.

Teng, groomed for the premiership by the late Premier Chou En-lai in the last two years of his life, had been the No. 1 target in the leftist campaign against "capitalist roadsters" but had not previously been publicly named.

The campaign organizers stressed that names were not to be used until the accusers were fully confident of their facts.

The campaign against "capitalist roadsters" pits radical leftists rigidly committed to ideology against moderates favoring alternative approaches to China's problems. China's acting premier, Hua Kuo-feng, is associated with the radicals.

THE POSTERS, which appeared in two courtyards in the Foreign Language Institute at Peking University, repeated accusations that Teng "took the capitalist road" and was a rightist attempting to destroy the fruits of the cultural revolution.

Teng also was accused of helping rehabilitate hundreds of officials from the army, government and Communist Party who had been disgraced, like himself, during the 1966-69 cultural revolution.

The Hungarian news agency MTI reported from Peking that the posters also call Teng a "fox" and a "traitor."

Many of the posters reportedly say the anti-Teng campaign is now being organized in the name of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Kelley denies reports on end to counterspy efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley Friday denied a report that the FBI has halted most efforts to track down Soviet spies in the United States. But he acknowledged there have been "changes in investigator procedures."

The director was responding to reports that Kelley's predecessor, the late J. Edgar Hoover, phased out several methods used to identify and track down undercover agents for Soviet and other hostile foreign intelligence services.

Counterintelligence and espionage investigations continue as one of the FBI's highest priorities," Kelley said.

Although changes in investigator procedures have occurred over the years, they in no way represent a deemphasis in this most important and essential area," he said.

The FBI is well aware of the fact that the United States remains a primary target of certain hostile intelligence services, and we must be unrelenting in our efforts to pursue vigorously and aggressively investigations of this nature," he added.

The reports said that the methods phased out included checking immigration records for traces of Cyrillic handwriting, opening mail to and from Soviet and East European embassies and missions in the U.S. and attempting to locate secret transmitters used by agents to beam messages overseas.

The Times said Hoover ended the mail-opening program in 1966 because he was reluctant to assign large numbers of agents to that task at the expense of investigating domestic radicals.

The search for clandestine transmitters ended in 1971, the reports said.

The program to scan immigration records for traces of the Cyrillic handwriting of the Russian language also ended in the late 1960s or early 1970s, according to the reports.

Hayden and Tunney woo liberal Dems

By DOUG WILLIS
AP Political Writer

U.S. Sen. John Tunney and his liberal challenger, Tom Hayden, courted the liberal wing of the Democratic Party Friday with parallel attacks on big business and the Ford administration.

The contest for the endorsement of the liberal California Democratic Council is the first direct confrontation this year between Tunney and Hayden.

Tunney, despite his incumbency, staked out the underdog's role in remarks in a midnight speech, openly conceding that he has had a rough time in past years with CDC, the most liberal statewide Democratic group in California.

HAYDEN emphasized his liberal platform and took what appeared to be a swipe at Democratic Gov. Brown in his remarks.

"I do not believe that senior citizens or poor people should be lowering their expectations," Hayden said, borrowing Brown's often-repeated "lower your expectations" slogan.

Tunney was trying to avert an endorsement for his antiwar activist opponent by stressing that he was liberal on many issues, although perhaps not as liberal as CDC would like.

"I do not pretend that all of you — or even most of you — agree with every one of my positions," Tunney said. "I was later than some in opposing the war in Vietnam," Tunney said, "but when Dr. (Henry) Kissinger and Mr. Ford tried their hand at a new entanglement (in Angola), I led the fight to stop that covert assistance once and for all."

TUNNEY said he opposes the "concentration of corporate power" with tougher antitrust laws, but he did not go as far as Hayden, who called for congressional hearings "to restructure and charter our big corporations so that they are responsible and accountable to the workers they employ and the consumers they serve."

Hayden also called for public ownership of natural resources and a foreign policy that will "really end the cold war (through) recognition and trade with those countries such as Vietnam, Cambodia and Cuba which we have bombed and embargoed for so long."

Tunney did not directly request the CDC endorsement in his prepared remarks, but said he hoped for their help in November to "keep this seat for a progressive Democratic voice."

THE endorsement

Voorhis named to panel on aging

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Jerry Voorhis, a former congressman who was the first victim of Richard Nixon's hard-slugging campaigns, was named by Gov. Brown Friday to the California Commission on Aging.

The 74-year-old Voorhis was the incumbent Democratic congressman representing the suburbs south and east of Los Angeles in 1946 when Nixon — freshly out of Navy — returned home to Whittier.

Nixon, who opened a law office and decided to run for Congress, told voters in a campaign brochure that a vote for Nixon would be a vote against "Communist-dominated" influences.

The "Communist-dominated" influence was the CIO Political Action Committee, which endorsed Voorhis and many other Democrats that year.

VOORHIS, who was

would be a significant victory for either contender in the June 8 Democratic primary.

But the Tunney-Hayden battle is only one of three major political events at the three-day CDC endorsing convention.

There is also a contest for the CDC endorsement for President. And Brown is scheduled to appear before CDC today.

Six years ago, in his first race for the U.S. Senate, Tunney was booed at the CDC convention. His primary opponent, Rep. George Brown, won the CDC endorsement by a 96 per cent margin.

This year Tunney is backed by Rep. Brown and U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, a cofounder of CDC. They jointly endorsed Tunney as "an articulate, knowledgeable and effective liberal Democrat."

THAT means Tunney will be in a stronger position with CDC. His campaign aides say they hope to block a Hayden endorsement, or win it for Tunney.

Hayden, the antiwar activist and former Chicago 7 defendant, has been making headway in what he describes as his "long-shot" campaign against Tunney.

A CDC endorsement would be a big boost for him. But if Hayden fails to win CDC support, it would raise questions about Hayden's claim to be a serious more liberal alternative to Tunney.

Because endorsements require a 60 per cent majority, chances are reduced that any presidential contender will capture a formal endorsement.

THAT fact has diminished the importance this year of the contest among presidential contenders. But even without a majority, the CDC vote Sunday is expected to give some measure of the relative strength of the presidential contenders among liberal California Democrats.

Brown's mixed liberalism on social issues and conservatism on spending issues has won approval of 87 per cent of Californians surveyed in a recent California Poll.

But liberal activists have been increasingly hostile to Brown's spending restraints, which they say have hit especially hard on social programs.

Brown has gone before other seemingly hostile groups in recent months, such as state employees facing layoffs, and received favorable receptions.

BUT the 20,000-member CDC, generally regarded as the most liberal major Democratic group in California, has been tough in the past on other politicians with liberal reputations who took compromise stands.

Lawyers' ads ban legality to be studied

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge Friday ordered that a three-judge court be convened to determine the constitutionality of a California state Bar rule banning advertising by lawyers.

U.S. District Court Judge Samuel Conti refused a state Bar motion to dismiss the suit brought against it by Consumers Union and instead ordered that the California Supreme Court be added as a defendant.

Stuart Forsyth, attorney for the Bar, contended his group only made recommendations on disciplining lawyers and that the state tribunal actually imposed the sanctions on those it finds warrants such punishment.

No date was set for the three-judge hearing.

The suit by Consumers Union and three San Francisco-area law firms serving low-income clients seeks to end all restrictions on advertising.

Union wants to arm parole officers

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State parole officers should be provided safety equipment, including pistols, because of "this age of increasing violence," the California State Employees Association said Friday.

The CSEA legal division is seeking a court order to force the state Department of Corrections to provide its 900 parole officers with revolvers, Mace and two-way radios.

A lawsuit was filed last week in Shasta County Superior Court on behalf of Charles Swim, a parole officer who lives in Redding, and all other Department of Corrections parole officers. The suit is scheduled to be heard March 8.

"We think being a parole officer is a dangerous job, and that the

Shackles in court restricted

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Supreme Court ruled Friday that defendants cannot be shackled during a trial in the jury's presence unless a need for the restraint is shown in the court record.

The ruling reaffirmed an 1871 decision and overturned the conviction of Bernardo Duran, convicted of a 1973 prison assault at the California Men's Colony at San Luis Obispo.

The 5-2 decision said that "physical restraint of defendants (cannot be justified) simply because they are prisoners already incarcerated on other charges or convictions."

"An accused may be restrained, for instance," said the court, "on a showing that he plans an escape from the courtroom or that he plans to disrupt proceedings by nonviolent means."

It said determinations of whether to use physical restraints must be made case-by-case.

THE RULING stemmed from Duran's trial on charges of stabbing a fellow prisoner. Duran requested that he and other witnesses be allowed to appear before the jury without wrist or ankle restraints, but the court denied the request.

Duran asserted in his appeal that the court had made a prejudicial error in denying his shackling motion and his request for cross-examination intended to show bias of a witness.

The high court agreed that the errors were prejudicial and said they provided grounds for reversing his conviction.

In a dissent, Justice William Clark said the threat to courtroom security "inherent in the defendant's propensity to violence was amply demonstrated."

officers should be allowed all the means to protect themselves and parolees," said Ken Perea, CSEA attorney.

Joining in the suit with the CSEA was the Parole Agents Association of California.

Helen Atkinson, assistant information director for the Department of Corrections, said the department will oppose the suit.

"Our policy is they do not carry guns. Over the years we have never had a parole agent stabbed or shot."

"Since everyone knows they are not armed, they are not subject to such attacks," she said, comparing parole officers with the unarmed English police.

She said that only two states provide weapons for parole officers, and California's policy had been to provide a weapon "if the officer is being threatened. Then the officer can seek permission."

The CSEA said this special circumstance is not enough.

"The absurdity of this,

coupled with the lack of communications devices, becomes more evident every day in this age of increasing violence," said Bob Bark, head of the CSEA law enforcement, regulatory and public safety program.

Rich Martin, CSEA spokesman, said, "Our position is not based on an overwhelming number of body injuries. Our position is based on the increasing release of felons under the Department of Corrections' new program. They're just pouring'em out on the streets."

"We see it as a preventive measure. We shouldn't wait until we have 1,700 incidents to document our case," Martin said.

CAB approves air fare boosts of 1, 2 per cent

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Friday agreed to let nine airlines raise their fares in the 48 contiguous states by 2 per cent over the next two weeks and said one carrier may hike fares by 1 per cent.

At the same time, the board agreed to let three airlines raise rates between mainland U.S. points and the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

The carriers that requested the 2-per cent domestic fare increase apparently will be allowed to put it into effect on selected routes instead of having to increase fares on all routes they serve. The CAB agreed earlier this week to allow the airlines to follow such a policy for a 1 per cent fare hike that went into effect Feb. 1, and United Air Lines said it intended to apply the 2 per cent fare increase to selected markets.

This procedure would allow the carriers to keep current fares on routes where they must compete against airlines that did not raise fares while raising rates on other routes where all carriers agreed to increase fares.

IT ALSO means that airline passengers may, in certain cases, find it cheaper to take other carriers or other routes to their destination.

The 2 per cent hike is effective Monday for American Airlines, Eastern Airlines, Trans World Airlines, United and Hughes Airwest. It will be effective Friday for Western Airlines, March 10 for Braniff International, March 11 for Southern and March 14 for Frontier and Texas International.

per cent except for Southern, which requested a 1 per cent hike.

Several major carriers, including Delta, National, Continental and Northwest, did not request the 2-per cent increase. It was not immediately known if any of those carriers would file for the increase now that it has been approved for the other airlines or if they would keep their current rates.

The increase was the second approved by the CAB on domestic routes this year. It earlier agreed to let most airlines raise their rates by 1 per cent on Feb. 1.

The 2 per cent hike would mean that the cost of a first-class round-trip ticket from New York to Houston would jump from the $322 charged at the end of 1975 to about $332 if it and the previous 1 per cent hike both were put into effect on that route.

A COACH ticket on the same route would jump from the $230 fare of two months ago to about $238.

The board's order on fares to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands affected three carriers—American, Eastern and Pan American World Airways.

The board agreed to let American and Eastern raise their fares between New York and San Juan, Puerto Rico, by 3 per cent and to hike fares on other mainland U.S. routes to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands by one-half of 1 per cent.

The board also allowed Pan Am to increase its fares on routes between the mainland and Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands by one half of 1 per cent.

Firms said getting better loan deals than consumers

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House Banking subcommittee study shows that most banks have reduced the cost of loans to big corporate borrowers but not to individual consumers.

The subcommittee on domestic monetary policy study included comparative figures on interest rates charged by banks in 10 metropolitan areas and in California. It was based on raw data collected by the Federal Reserve Board in its latest survey of banks for interest rates.

That information had been kept secret by the Federal Reserve until Consumers Union filed suit under the Freedom of Information Act to force disclosure. Consumers Union maintained that the Federal Reserve should help consumers make choices about which banks would give them the best return for their money.

The Federal Reserve fought the suit, although it acknowledged that the data was public information available to any individual who took the time to check each bank for interest rates.

In a statement released with the House subcommittee study, Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., said that although market-place interest rates have declined dramatically from all-time highs of two or three years ago during the height of inflation, consumers have benefitted little.

"While the prime customers—the big corporate borrowers—have been getting better breaks at the loan windows, this survey clearly shows that the people who are borrowing to buy automobiles and consumer goods continue to pay excessively high interest rates at commercial banks," Patman said.

He said consumers pay top dollars on loans but are not paid the maximum permitted for interest on bank savings accounts.

"Thus the consumer is often hit at both ends of the transaction—high interest on loans and low interest on savings," Patman said.

The study showed that from November 1974 to November 1975 the average interest rate for consumer goods went from 13.16 per cent to 12.96 per cent; for autos from 11.57 per cent to 11.24 per cent and for personal loans from 13.47 per cent to 13.40 per cent.

However, during the same period the average prime rate, which is charged to a bank's most credit-worthy corporate customers for short-term loans, dropped from 10.5 per cent to 7.5 per cent. And the Federal Reserve discount rate, the amount banks pay to borrow money, dropped from 7.5 per cent to 6 per cent.

The subcommittee's study was based on Federal Reserve data collected on banks in the Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas-Ft. Worth, Detroit, Miami, New York, Newark, Philadelphia and Washington metropolitan areas and from California, where most major banks have offices throughout the state.

An aide to Patman said when the study and Patman's statement were released that the subcommittee would publish more of the data at regular intervals.

Auto chief resignation 'voluntary'

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—James B. Gregory, who resigned suddenly this week as the government's top auto safety regulator, insisted Friday that he quit voluntarily.

"I was not asked to resign," Gregory, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) told a House subcommittee. "I was not fired. There are no hidden meanings in my decision."

BUT Gregory acknowledged that his departure was motivated by the "frustration" of trying to regulate safety in the face of hostility from automakers and truckers, and indifference by much of the public.

Although 20,000 lives a year are being saved because of government auto safety regulations, he said, most citizens think safety is "about as exciting as a bad haircut."

"Any regulatory job is a minefield," Gregory said. "There is pressure all the time...I just got up one morning and said, 'it's a good time to lay this career to rest.'"

CB radio also headache for FCC

New fad sweeping America

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press

Millions of Americans looking for highway conversation and motoring advice have turned to Citizens Band radios, boosting industry sales and causing headaches for government officials trying to keep up with the boom.

The Federal Communications Commission, which licenses CB operators, was receiving about 15,000 applications a month at the start of 1974. By December 1975, the number of applications had jumped to 415,000 a month and the FCC expects to handle 3.6 million license requests during 1976.

The electronic industry says sales of CB equipment are expected to reach $1 billion this year, up from $400 million in 1974.

ONE reason for the boom was the publicity given to independent truckers protesting the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit. The truckers illegally used their CB radios to warn each other of state troopers and the fancifully named drivers with a language of their own became pop figures in songs, books and even a television series.

The 23-channel CB network established in 1958 as an inexpensive form of two-way radio communication for short, personal messages became a major cult. Some operators simply wanted to join the colorful world of the truckers; others wanted the information on weather conditions and police operations that the drivers traded.

But the commission says some operators simply don't want to be bothered waiting since it can take up to 10 weeks to process an application.

Other unlicensed CB users operate their radios for illegal purposes—communicating information about burglaries, narcotics deals and transportation of stolen goods.

Breaking the rules—with or without a license—can mean penalties. A licensed violator of FCC regulations can be fined up to $200 and lose his license; an unlicensed operator faces a penalty of up to $10,000 and a year in jail.

The FCC's Field Operations Bureau, which has 30 staff offices across the country, got 45,000 complaints about CB radios last year. Most of them concerned interference to television sets and other home entertainment items and most stemmed from defects in the receiving equipment, including lack of a filter to screen out unwanted signals.

THE most popular CB radios, accounting for about 70 per cent of sales, are the mobile sets for use in cars, boats, etc. Other varieties include base station models for a permanent set-up and portable walkie-talkies.

The Office of Consumer Affairs advises would-be buyers to check the warranty of any set they are considering to find out what parts are guaranteed and for how long. Shoppers also should make sure the unit has been approved by the FCC. There should be a sticker on the radio itself.

The office suggests equipping a CB radio with a detachable antenna. The sets are targets for theft and an antenna is a clue to a thief that a car has a CB radio.

IPT Classifieds Bring Results First Time

Mr. & Mrs. Michael Richardson of Carson learned the hard way that Independent Press-Telegram Classifieds ads are the best way to sell unwanted possessions. After two unsuccessful attempts in other newspapers to sell their 25' cabin cruiser they turned to the IPT. Their ad brought a dozen calls and the right buyer. To sell their second boat they turned to IPT Classifieds first.

Sell just about anything quickly and economically through Independent Press-Telegram Classifieds ads. Call 432-5555 to place your result-getting ad.

The number of licenses doesn't even begin to reflect all the CB sets in operation. One license can cover several sets. A corporation, for example, may get one license for all the sets used by its employees. In addition, Charles Higginbotham of the FCC's Safety and Special Radio Services Division says that for every three or four licensed operators, there is one unlicensed operator.

The commission estimates that overall, there are about 11 million CB sets in operation across the country.

THE FCC lowered its license fee from $20 to $4 last March in an effort to encourage people to register. The price of a CB set depends on the number of channels and the range available. The FCC's maximum limit for CB transmissions is 150 miles. The fewer the channels and the shorter the range, the cheaper. The most heavily monitored frequencies are Channels 9, 11 and 19. Channel 9 has been set aside by the FCC for highway safety reports; 11 is for establishing communication; and 19 is the major channel used by truckers to exchange information.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Harsh corners of house walls need to be softened with shrubbery, and it can be done one of two ways.

Gardener can plant a bushy growing shrub close to corner to break the bareness. Or a more artistic way is to create an espallier form with pyracantha branches carefully trained to grow upward on one side of the wall, and the remaining branches trained to grow on the other wall.

The branches must be tied to special supports on the house walls.

The best time to prune pyracantha is during the blooming season.

dra inquilatara, has striking looking stamens of rich pink that form fluffy powder-puff blossoms.

The daintier medium-size variety, calliandra guildingi, has fine lacy leafage and smaller blossoms which are a rich scarlet.

SOME varieties of sasanqua camellias, with their willowy growth branches, too, can be espalliered to cover walls. This group of camellias will grow in sun or shade, whereas the japonica type needs more shade than sun.

We've had a number of requests from organic gardeners as to where they can purchase nature's controls instead of using chemical sprays. We have a helpful answer for those folks.

SHRUB SCREENS HOUSE WALLS

Pyracanthas are problem plants for many gardeners. They usually are purchased when they have berries on them. Gardeners often wonder why the plants don't berry the next year. This is primarily due to the fast root growth when the plant discovers all that room in a garden.

The plants will begin to bear berries once they get a good root system established, and thereafter produce berries annually in season.

There's quite a range of shrubs whose branches can be trained to supports to cover bare walls. There are two varieties of the evergreen tropical shrub, Calliandra, that can be used for an espalliering effect.

The huskiest and most vigorous grower, callian-

Gardeners can purchase ladybugs from Burpee Seed Company in Riverside. A half pint of them is enough for a small garden, a quart for a half acre.

The ladybugs greedily search the plants for the larvae of plant-destroying insects, including fruit scales, aphids, fleas, thrips, leaf hoppers and tree lice.

Praying mantis eggs are sold in cases. The young have a voracious appetite for aphids, flies, beetles, caterpillars, grasshoppers, and other plant-damaging pests. Females lay brown egg cases on low growing twigs in the fall, and they usually survive moderate winters. The cases hatch 100 to 200 praying mantis.

JUST LIKE egg hatches, the dreaded spurge weeds sprout instead of hatch from weed seeds scattered the previous fall and grow unmolested.

Gardeners would be wise to use a recommended pre-emerge herbicide and spray a dichondra lawn now.

Such a herbicide will also sterilize the seeds of blade-type weeds as well as a host of small broad-leaf weed seeds. See listing on the herbicide label.

Spurge and several types of small and large broad-leaf weeds can be controlled in a blade lawn, providing the weeds are growing or have started to grow. Check with your nurseryman for a post-emerge herbicide spray.

Jobs for gardeners

Vegetables are available in pony packs, or in the individual plastic containers ready to set out. Consider the soil of these plants as having been lovingly prepared by the wholesale grower. Likewise the plants will continue to grow better if they are set out in a prepared soil somewhat comparable to the soil they grew up in.

Fuchsias in protected areas may be pruned back. Study the size and shape of the plants. Cut them back approximately one third their size. Scrape off any remaining top dressing, scatter bone meal or flower-fruit fertilizer over the well watered soil, lightly chop into the soil, then spread a quarter inch of organic top dressing over the soil and water down.

Feed the plants lightly with a high nitrogen fertilizer several times, then switch to a lower nitrogen one, but containing more phosphoric acid.

Scatter snail-slug bait periodically in the garden and particularly in the ground cover areas where they mostly breed.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MARCH 1-7, 1976

Begin like a lamb, but it's a sham.

Town meetings begin this week... Glenn Miller born March 1, 1909... Average length of days for the week, 11 hours, 22 minutes... Skunks emerge now... Battle of Alamo March 6, 1836... International Ice Patrol started March 5, 1959... If you hear thunder this week, it means fine fall crops... Facts do not cease to exist because they are ignored.

Old Farmer's Riddle: How can you make a Maltese cross? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: Have you ever heard that burning fresh potato peelings on top of the logs in a fireplace will help clean the chimney? I have tried it, but can't tell whether it works. H.K., Auburn, N.Y.

A very old custom — and so far as we know it never fails. Of course older folks are more potatoes than we do today, so the doses of peelings were frequent and liberal.

House Hint: To hide scratches on natural wood cabinets and woodwork, rub with mineral oil on a soft cloth. The scratch will assume the shade of the woodwork.

Riddle answer: Pull its tail.

YOUR HOROSCOPE
by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Your challenge is to learn to think ahead. Visualize the probable consequences of changes you must make. It's a year to taper off from longstanding detrimental habits and attitudes. In relationships, you need to decide whether to continue with people who are set in their ways. Today's natives have their own special views of reality, are energetic and usually fond of sports.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Start early to get all the advantages this "extra day" has to offer. Your encouragement of those less fortunate brings tremendous benefits.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Start fresh from where you are with no malice or retribution for anything that is past. Clear away mental clutter and avoid new distractions.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Everyone has some (ad) interest: the latest news is unrealistic. It's up to you to decide what is best to hold on to and what to discard.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Catch up on local events, but offer no strong opinions. Nothing is easily changed. No one is ready to let go of the past and proceed as logic dictates.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): At family reunions, discuss possible improvements to be shared by all. You can present an idea in such a way as to attract financial backing.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to make yourself and friends happy with whatever is at hand this relatively quiet Sunday. Take part in neighborhood customs without comment.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take the long way around to your destination, even if a bit late. People expect you to provide entertainment. Share fun, but don't exceed your budget.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A rest and meditation period is in order. Be patient with older folk, their traditions and problems. Don't leap to conclusions about romance.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hospitality is not only a pleasure to extend; it results in personal enhancement. Consider seriously the emotional needs of those at home.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The impressions you make now are permanent. Be equitable in community relations. Renew contacts with old friend and VIPs, but don't talk business.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In jumping at an opportunity, be sure that you get names, facts and figures right. Spending runs over your budget, but circumstances soften the blow.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your higher energy level allows for better planning. If you're doing research, this is a day of discovery. Catch up on correspondence.

TM in trouble in N.J. schools

By JAMES ROBINSON
Knight News Service

A major push to teach Transcendental Meditation (TM) in the nation's public high schools may be short-circuited by a suit charging the courses are religion instruction, and thus unconstitutional.

The suit, filed this week by a coalition of parents, civil rights, and religious groups in New Jersey federal District Court, comes after more than a quarter of a million dollars in public funds have been spent since 1974 to underwrite TM courses in public schools, prisons, and hospitals.

"TM is merely a subtly disguised form of Hinduism," said a spokesman for the coalition. TM is a religious exercise, he said, and using the taxpayers' money to teach it violates church-state separation principles.

TM proponents, however, for years have said that TM is not a religion but a scientific technique for reducing stress.

More than 600,000 Americans practice TM.

THE SUIT is aimed at stopping experimental TM projects in four New Jersey high schools using a $40,612 grant from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The grant was secured under a program for testing innovative teaching projects, TM supporters said.

The TM advocates hope the New Jersey case will support the purported usefulness of TM, opening the door for greater public funding of TM courses nationwide.

With that aim in mind, the World Plan Executive Council (WPEC), a Los Angeles-based group working to spread TM, has just completed a textbook on the Science of Creative Intelligence, part of a three-year curriculum for incorporating TM in secondary schools.

AND TM proponents say they have secured $269,500 in federal, state, city, and county funds for TM programs in connection with drug, alcohol, and mental health projects.

The New Jersey suit alleges that the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, founder and leader of the TM movement, is a religious leader.

The suit also charges that "the religious and spiritual philosophy, principles, practices, beliefs, teachings, doctrines, and rituals of the Maharishi and the affiliated organizational conglomerate are being taught."

TM opponents argue that although the Maharishi has denied that TM is a religion, the teachings in the course are oriented to the Hindu religion and to a God-like image.

"I WOULD refute that claim categorically," said the Rev. John R. Dilley, a Presbyterian minister in Fairfield where its proponents have established a university for TM.

State combining two mental health units

SACRAMENTO (AP) — In a move to save millions of dollars, the State Department of Health said Friday it is combining two of its divisions for the mentally ill into one.

Bob Nance, department spokesman, said the "waste" under the setup now is "incredible, and the state hopes to save millions by acting on a Little Hoover Commission suggestion that the change be made."

The commission, which recently issued a report critical of the department's organization, made the suggestion about consolidating the State Hospitals and Community Services divisions, Nance said.

The two will tentatively become a unit called the Developmental and Mental Disabilities Division.

Nance said waste in the 20 regional centers under the Community Services Division was "fantastic."

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

'Stay in School'

Joe is 18. And he has been trying to get work for over a year. The future seems to hold little in store for him. He's got a dream too; it's to buy a fast car. Beyond that he has no goals. Will Joe find a job? Will Joe get anywhere in life? Perhaps, if he's lucky, but his chances are not very good, for he already has a strike against him. You see, he is a high-school dropout.

It is reported that countless number of kids in the United States each year turn their backs on one of the greatest advantages offered to them — 12 years of free education. They don't realize that only through education can people experience self-development and attain identity. An education can help Joe acquire the foundations in information and skills that he needs to get along in the complex world of today.

Will Joe become a delinquent? Well, it's possible. Certainly he isn't going to develop appreciations or acquire enthusiasm for constructive work hanging around the streets, the taverns or the pool halls. According to U.S. Department of Labor figures, dropouts are not only more often unemployed, but are also out of work for longer periods of time. And you really can't blame a personnel manager if he thinks to himself, "If this kid didn't finish school, how can I depend on him? Why should I take on his troubles when there are plenty of better risks? Besides, who wants to gamble on a guy who doesn't want to go anywhere?"

What made Joe a school dropout? The immediate cause was an argument with a teacher over an unfinished assignment, but the problem had been building up over a long period of time. Joe consistently failed in his studies for a number of years. And he never took part in extra-curricular activities. He thought most of the kids were square and the teachers were unfair. He saw himself an outsider and, because he felt nobody cared, he didn't care either. Joe grew up saying, "It's no use." Instead of "I will try!" And that makes all the difference.

A student, to be successful, must be directed. And his behavior, of course, can be inspired by his teachers. From them he should learn some human dignity. A sincere student grows mentally and even spiritually, and hopefully learns to know himself. But this can only come if teachers are continuously growing too and if they help young people develop self-confidence and self-respect. Sadly enough, this isn't always the case. At a boy's school a new headmaster was chosen. After the appointment was announced, a teacher approached the chairman of the selection committee with a gnawing question. "I have accepted the fact that I wasn't picked for the headmastership," he said negatively, "but can you tell me why I wasn't at least considered? After all I have 20 years' teaching experience here."

"That's not quite the way we looked at it," came the reply. "In your case, the board felt that what you've had is one year's experience repeated 20 times."

That's the kind of teacher we don't need. Classroom teachers must not allow themselves to get dull and negative, for they can be the strongest force from the primary grades on, upgrading the quality of work youngsters will do and motivating them to stay in school.

Fortunately, there are many dedicated men and women who are putting every effort into becoming effective and inspiring teachers. I recently received a letter from such a teacher who writes, "There are many unhappy people at ... high school. The atmosphere of defeat, bitterness, frustration, and hostility seems to engulf some of the teachers like an evil cloud. The cloud waits patiently to take you into its arms, for a second, a minute, a class, a day, a week, a month — forever. Every day in every way it becomes harder and harder to break away, to resist bleak despair, to fight the good fight."

"I, too, must admit I was losing the ability to generate enough spark to keep the cloud at bay, and negativism began to creep into my thoughts. However, I know how important it is to think optimistically and I wouldn't allow myself to continue with these thoughts. Kids need teachers with positive attitudes who can boost their morale and offer encouragement. Because of this we have formed an 'optimism cell' and call ourselves the Minutemen, a group that meets at a minute's notice when a member needs support. We hope eventually to include the whole school in our membership. I can't say that the cloud is defeated yet, but I see many more smiles these days."

Perhaps if Joe had had a teacher who encouraged optimism, things might have been a little different.

Dad to daughter

"Dad, you've been going to church for years, served on councils, given the pulpit bit now and then, and yet I have no real, gut level feeling for the depth of your belief in God. Why is that?"

For a long moment I looked at Chris, my married daughter, in dismay. A strong desire to see Jeff and her within the Christian faith (Lutherans if convenient) almost led me to be less than candid. After all I could still remember the pain in her eyes when she found out that Santa Claus was really her older brother up on the roof, jingling bells and tossing packages down the chimney. But the question cried for a soul searching, totally different than our usual banter. So taking a deep breath, I began to tell my beloved offspring where my religious heart lay.

"Years ago, Chris, when I discovered the pure pleasure of being a Scout leader, I had one major obstacle to overcome. Having but a limited belief or knowledge of religion, it was with a high degree of inner reluctance that I conducted Sunday morning Scout's Own. My faith was a tiny mustard seed, consisting mainly of the meaning behind Christ's parables. I fully appreciated the wonderful world it would be if all men loved one another. But I had a problem exemplified by the man who wittily said the miracles made Christ much harder to understand."

And so I built my simple, little chapel talks around those portions of the Bible which I understood and wherein I felt comfortable. Avoiding the areas where deep belief was essential, my topics concentrated on Jesus, the man and the teacher. I have built on that small drop of faith and today I am quite comfortable in my rear pew. The vengeful God of the Old Testament still gives me trouble but the loving father of Jesus has captured me completely."

For a time we sat in contemplation and I wondered if it was a coincidence the stereo was playing a Johnny Cash religious tape. Then her brown eyes caught mine and I recognized the old tell-tale gleam indicating further questioning was on its way. "O.K., pappy dear, I can accept the teachings of Christ myself but why go to church? You say the back pew suits you and some of the sermon must cause an inner rejection if you don't believe that portion of the Bible. Don't you feel like a hypocrite sitting there and inwardly disagreeing with the pastor?"

One thing about Chris, she does not ask easy questions. I'd often wondered how she had got along with her college professors and was willing to bet she had made a few wish they had prepared more carefully for the day's topic.

"Before we cover the rejection items of Church, let's go over the ones that bring us pleasure. I of course enjoy the music, the coffee hours, the special programs and the friendships developed over the years. There is something about the communion service which evokes a very intense reaction. In addition on successful Sundays I get a glimpse of a better way, a vision of how it could be, a challenge to strive for an improved world. Of course, there are Sundays when inner disquiet or outer distractions prevent this from happening. On those days your question of why go to church could only be answered in the negative. But through the years I have come to find many life-guiding beacons within the service. It may be a phrase from a hymn, a thought from the sermon or an age old truth shining through a Gospel reading. In any case on a successful Sunday, I catch and hold within me something very precious. It is a small price to pay, having to gloss over some portions of the Bible."

Leaning over I brushed her cheek with my lips and was surprised to find a trace of salty moisture. I have no way of telling whether Chris and Jeff will return to the church of their younger years but I am quite happy I did not choose a path of artfully dodging her questions.

Rescue

Religion Editor:
For some time now I've been meaning to write you and thank you for the fine job you are doing. You tell it like it is and show no partiality to any one particular group.

Especially do I thank you for the good articles on the Long Beach Rescue Mission. I'm well acquainted with their work and know what a super job they're doing in our city. You've given them such good, honest coverage. I'm sure this has been a great help to them. Our Church (Christian Life Assembly) goes down there often and we know that this is a fruit-bearing ministry.

God bless you. I shall remember you in prayer with a thankful heart.

Prejudice

Religion Editor:
It's easily understandable that you use the rule of "a secular editor" to attack the Tidings. But you're not fooling anyone, because your prejudice against the Roman Catholic Church has been apparent for some time. Does the Catholic Church owe you anything? If it does, let's hear about it. If it doesn't, then please don't concern yourself with its business.

Mrs. Margaret Malone

Right Church?

Religion Editor:
I just finished reading your Feb. 14 editorial for the tenth time. Are you in right church? That is a good question. Another good question is: "Which is the right church? With 250 Churches serving Christ in 250 different ways, how do I know which is right? Only one can be and it is possible that none of them are."

I will not be lead into one just because they teach what I would like to hear. To do this is to fulfill scripture. 2 Tim 2:14 and 2 Thess. 2:14.

To say that 250 churches all serve the Lord Christ but they serve him in 250 different ways is to completely ignore Christ's own words. (Matt. 7:14) Straight is the gate and narrow the way that lead dith unto life and few there be that find it. I want to find it. Just which Church will lead me on that straight and narrow path? How can I find it?

"Thank you, God."
Take a minute, right now, to think of the good you have to be grateful for. Not things, but ideas and qualities that you express and enjoy in others.
Feeling gratitude for good, and living it every moment, is essential — because a grateful heart recognizes God's goodness and is ready to receive more.
In our church this week, people share their gratitude by telling of healings and other proofs they've had of God's care. Won't you bring your family? We'd love to welcome you.

CLENCHED-FIST salute by Patricia Hearst after her 1975 arrest reflected "confusion," not guerrilla defiance, psychiatrist testified Friday.

PATTY HEARST

has already testified that she never wrote to her family and refused Wendy's suggestions that she contact them.

The Harrises, now in jail in Los Angeles awaiting trial, recently stated that Patty was not under their control, that they lived apart and Patty often went grocery shopping alone, took hikes, visited a doctor and went to a laundry without them.

Lifton told Bancroft that Patty never told him about going to movies, or visiting a laundry or attending college classes during the "missing year." He said he never asked her about a Sacramento City College registration card, in the name of Sue Hendricks, which was found in Patty's apartment when she was arrested.

A Yale psychiatrist who began his research on brainwashing in the 1950s, interviewing and treating repatriates from the Chinese prison camps, Lifton listed eight methods used in those camps and then told chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey that Miss Hearst was exposed "in some aspect" to every one of them.

LIFTON'S testimony was briefly interrupted by the illness of one of the jurors, Mrs. Helen Westin, 54, who has been suffering from nausea. She hastily left the jury box, her handkerchief over her face, during the direct examination, but returned after a brief court recess.

Before the psychiatrist testified, and in the absence of the jurors, Bailey told U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter that the defense was "reluctantly" withdrawing a motion to introduce lie-detector evidence.

Carter had set a hearing to determine the admissibility of polygraph evidence, but Bailey said that if it were allowed "it could be construed as a waiver" of his objections to the court order that forced Miss Hearst to take the Fifth Amendment.

Lifton told the jurors that Miss Hearst went through everything—dehumanization, terror, death anxiety, self-betrayal, guilt, isolation, confession, compliance—suffered by the men and women he has interviewed who have been survivors of enemy imprisonments.

WHEN she was captured, he said, she was suffering from "the survivor syndrome—traumatic neurosis," but is showing a remarkable recovery because she is beginning to hate the captors who "brutalized" her.

"When I saw her last Saturday," he said, "she asked me, 'How could they be so cruel to another human being?'" After she revisited with her jury the small closets in which she was kept blindfolded for 57 days by the SLA, Lifton said, she cried out to him: "My God, how could they do that to another person?"

The psychiatrist said that when repatriated prisoners came back from China, Korea, World War II and Vietnam, some of them continued to echo ideological rhetoric or said their captors had been kind to them. This same thing happened with Miss Hearst, he said, as indicated by her clenched-fist salute, and by her signing herself into jail as an urban guerrilla.

MISS Hearst was even more "confused" than most repatriates, Lifton said, because two of her captors, the Harrises, were arrested with her, and he pointed out to the jurors: "Your captors don't usually come back with you." Because of this, he explained, she had "difficulty in clarifying the end of her role" as "Tania the guerrilla."

'Some of them were ...in a state of shock'

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

"Somebody yelled, 'Earthquake!,' and part of the roof and balcony caved in on top of the pool."

"The pool lights went out, and the pool was black with debris. Everybody was screaming—it was like a madhouse in there—some of them were just standing there in a state of shock."

"We just wanted to find our son," said Lillian and Jack Shuman, 484 Adair St., minutes after a balcony and part of a ceiling collapsed over the YWCA swimming pool in downtown Long Beach.

"We looked over in the shallow part of the pool, and some people were pulling the debris off of him. He had been trapped underwater," the anxious parents added while awaiting treatment for their son, George, at St. Mary Medical Center.

George, a 12-year-old seventh grader at Hamilton Junior High School, said he was in the shallow portion of the pool when "there was kind of a cracking sound, and the lifeguard ordered everybody out of the pool."

"Then the ceiling just gave way. Most of the people—there were about 15 or 20 there—were in the middle of the pool, and they didn't have time to get out," he added.

"There was plaster on my back, and I was pinned underwater, but some people came and freed me right away," he said.

GEORGE and his companion, Peter Tolton, also 12, suffered cuts and bruises on their arms and backs when the debris cascaded into the pool.

"I was under water. I didn't hear anything," said Peter. "I just know I was under water, and all of a sudden I couldn't see anything. I was pinned down by all this plaster and stuff, so I just breathed through my face mask until I could kick my way through the plaster."

Peter was among those who freed George, according to the Shumans.

The two youths, both visibly shaken, said most of the debris in the pool consisted of "plaster, beams—like two-by-fours—wires and nails, lots of nails."

Janice Teters, 13, and her brother, Buddy, 12, were also in the pool but were not injured. Their grandmother, Sarah Gibson, 57, was in the balcony when it collapsed. She was reported in good condition at St. Mary Medical Center.

GEORGE, who has been attending the recreational swimming sessions at the YWCA since he was 6 months old, said there were more people than usual in the pool Friday night.

"We've been here many times when there were only three or four people in the pool," he said. "But last week there were about 40—the people at the Y said it was one of the best weeks ever—and this week there were about 20 people there."

The Shumans said they've also taken the boys to the city-owned Belmont Plaza Pool for recreational swimming but that the youths said they preferred the YWCA pool because it's usually less crowded.

Embassy death settlement bared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The husband of a woman who died of cancer after working at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow received a settlement from the U.S. government in a lawsuit that said she was a victim of radiation, informed sources said Friday.

The compensation, understood to be less than $10,000, was made on grounds she had received inadequate medical care, it was learned.

The woman, a secretary, died in 1968. Her husband was an administrative officer at the embassy and currently works at the State Department.

A marked increase in the intensity of Soviet microwave beams at the embassy six months ago has raised concerns about the health of Ambassador Walter Stoessel Jr., his staff and visitors.

SOURCES say the Russians were trying to jam rooftop devices they believed were being used to eavesdrop on the conversations of Soviet officials living and working in the downtown area of the Soviet capital.

Dr. William Watson, medical director of the department, said that "the medical division has found no medical problems that it believes to be related to the situation at the embassy."

However, it was learned that the medical records of embassy personnel dating back some 20 years were being checked.

"I would not exclude that as one of the things we are doing to protect the health of our people," an official here said privately.

Earlier, the department disclosed that a medical technician had been sent to Moscow to conduct blood tests on embassy personnel.

THE technician, Robert Griffin, replaces a part-time technician. A new physician, Dr. Sam Zweifel, was sent to Moscow Feb. 20 to oversee the blood tests.

The department's press office described Zweifel, 50, as a family practitioner and said he had been sent to Moscow simply to allow Dr. Thomas Johnson, the physician normally on duty, to go on a three-week vacation.

Normally, when the embassy doctor takes leave, the U.S. workers are treated by the British physician or a doctor at another embassy. Acknowledging a departure, Robert L. Funseth, the department spokesman, said, "The employees would feel more comfortable if they had their own colleague there."

PRIVATELY, as well as publicly, department officials willing to discuss the situation insist that no causal connection has been established between the microwave emissions and any illness.

In the case of the woman secretary whose husband sued, an official suggested that the compensation was actually paid on the basis of faulty medical diagnosis and had nothing to do with the Soviet beams.

Reached at his home, the husband declined to discuss the case. "I don't think it would serve any purpose," he said.

TAX CUT

would be left with something near the same tax status as now prevails as a result of the two tax cuts approved last year.

—The $3.3-billion Social Security tax increase asked by Ford would be rejected.

—Elderly Americans would not be faced with the higher charges Ford proposes to pay for existing Medicare benefits, a start would be made on the first program of national health insurance for all Americans, and up to $2 billion more a year would be provided state and local governments in revenue-sharing funds.

The Finance Committee actions were part of the new procedures designed to give Congress tighter control over the budget-making process. Using reports from the Finance Committee and the other legislative panels, the Senate Budget Committee will propose a congressional budget by April 15.

IN OUTLINING his 1977 budget last month, Ford called for a tax cut of about $29 billion, which is around $10 billion more than the tax reductions enacted last year.

Almost as soon as the Ford budget was made public, Long said the nation would be better off if that "extra" $10 billion were used to improve health, welfare and Social Security programs.

Long used stronger language this week in successfully bringing his colleagues around to his point of view.

"In effect we're going to play Scrooge by taking from these poor old people" whose Medicare charges Ford proposed to raise and giving the money to more affluent Americans as tax cuts.

"Some poor old soul is going to be thrown out of the hospital on his ear and left to die in the street... We can't afford that $10-billion tax cut if that's how you're going to pay for it," Long said.

Soliah's sister said indicted in bomb case

Associated Press

Kathleen Soliah, the 28-year-old Berkeley woman who may have unwittingly led the FBI to Patricia Hearst, has been indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury, it was reported Friday.

The secret indictment, returned Thursday before Judge Jack E. Goertzen, named Miss Soliah in connection with the planting of pipe bombs under two Los Angeles police cars last summer, the Los Angeles Times reported.

She is the sister of Steven Soliah, 27, who is now in Sacramento where his trial on bank robbery charges is scheduled to start March 8. Miss Hearst has said she lived with Soliah prior to her capture in a San Francisco apartment.

Details of the exact charges filed against Miss Soliah have yet to be disclosed, and it was not known whether others were named in the indictment. Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael Marcus presented the case to the grand jury but would not comment on it.

The whereabouts of Miss Soliah are unknown, authorities said.

Two pipe bombs were found on the ground under police cars on Aug. 22, authorities said. Both explosive devices were similar in construction, wrapped in plastic and contained triggering devices. They were defused without incident.

Soliah defense attacks girl who 'may have seen Patty'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A witness' comment that she may have seen Patricia Hearst at a bank hold-up here was belittled Friday by Steven Soliah's attorneys, who introduced the testimony in the first place.

A defense investigator Thursday quoted Martha Ouimet as saying it was her impression that a robber in a red ski mask was Miss Hearst.

Defense attorney Sheldon Otis said the testimony showed witnesses' identifications were influenced by prosecution hints that Miss Hearst and the Symbionese Liberation Army were linked to the holdup.

"OBVIOUSLY she (Mrs. Ouimet) came to those conclusions because of what she had read and heard, not because of what she had seen," Otis said at a pretrial hearing.

"That's human nature. We become indoctrinated."

Otis contended Mrs. Ouimet and some other eyewitnesses were also influenced by publicity when they picked out Soliah's picture or identified him in a lineup.

Soliah, a 27-year-old house painter and former companion of Miss Hearst, is charged with taking part in a $15,000 Crocker National Bank robbery here last April 21 in which a woman was killed.

Though Soliah is the only person charged in the case, the FBI has said five persons took part in the robbery, and that Miss Hearst rented a garage in which a getaway car was stored.

THE TRIAL is scheduled to begin March 8. Otis said Friday he expects jury selection to take two weeks and the trial another four to six weeks.

The lengthy pretrial hearings center on defense motions to bar some eyewitness testimony on grounds that identifications were prompted by law enforcement officers, prosecutors and publicity.

Defense attorneys also made another attempt Friday to transfer the case away from Sacramento. They cited publicity from Miss Hearst's San Francisco trial in another bank robbery case and from purported identifications of both Miss Hearst and Soliah during the last few days of hearings.

U.S. DISTRICT Court Judge Philip Wilkins rejected the request but said he would reconsider it during jury selection if potential jurors appeared to have been influenced by publicity.

In seeking to block the eyewitness testimony, Otis contended photo selection and a police lineup had been rigged, though not necessarily intentionally.

He said the picture of Soliah that several bank employees selected was marked with his name and arrest date, and was shown to witnesses last September only a few days after the highly publicized arrests of Soliah and Miss Hearst.

WEATHER MEETING

mura, a Berkeley artist who had fled the Bay Area in 1972 after police learned of Miss Yoshimura's alleged involvement in a bomb plot on the University of California campus.

The hunt for both Miss Hearst and Miss Yoshimura came to an end last Sept. 18 when they were seized in an apartment here within an hour of the arrest of the Harris couple.

Investigators believe that Miss Yoshimura may have used her connections with the Weather Underground to aid in her escape from this area to the East Coast.

It could not be immediately determined what the purpose was of having Miss Boudin meet "Tania," the revolutionary name given to Miss Hearst by the SLA. In its publications, the Weather group had been critical of the "military-like" tactics adopted by the SLA. However, before her capture, the publications praised Miss Hearst for joining in a revolution "against the capitalists."

In her testimony, Miss Hearst identified other persons she met in New York City and at the farmhouse but did not mention Miss Boudin.

Her attorney, F. Lee Bailey, said last week that one of the reasons his client invoked the Fifth Amendment to a series of questions was because she feared for her life. "She has already named many people she fears, but others have not yet been named," he said.

Mrs. Catherine Hearst, Patricia's mother, also expressed concern for her daughter's life during an exclusive interview last week. "Patty knows these people.... She knows what they're capable of doing," Mrs. Hearst said. "And their underground network of terrorism extends across the country."

Miss Boudin, a one-time magna cum laude at Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania, is wanted in Chicago for her participation in the violent Days of Rage in October 1969. In addition to taking part in a damaging rampage in Chicago's downtown area, she also attempted to lead a group of club-wielding women radicals from the lakefront Grant Park.

Millikan rolls, St. Anthony falls

Rams tumble Inglewood

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

A one-point loss to Poly a week ago may have been a blessing in disguise for Millikan High.

The Rams, hitting an eye-opening 64 per cent (32-of-50) of their shots, ran off with a 79-70 first-round CIF 4-A victory at Bay League champion Inglewood Friday night.

Forward Rhett Heckel led the way with 24 points, center John White added 20 and guards Doug Marty and Jim Whalen chipped in with 14 and 13 respectively to spark another remarkably well-balanced attack.

The new twist for a Bill

Odell-coached team, however, was a 1-2-2 zone defense, one that Odell had used at times with what he thought was great effectiveness a week ago in a tough 61-60 setback to Moore league champion and top-seeded Poly.

"I thought it enabled us to control the tempo just as it had against Poly," he said, noting that it was especially true when White and forwards Heckel, Hal Goodwin and Steve Trefzger were in foul trouble.

The victory, although a decisive one against an Inglewood team that had dominated a strong league, was not without more than a few anxious moments for Odell.

The Rams scored three quick baskets in the final 54 seconds of the first quarter to take a seven-point (24-17) lead and seemed on the verge of making the game a runaway, drawing out to a 45-33 halftime advantage.

But everything went wrong during the first 3:30 of the third quarter.

Goodwin and White drew their fourth fouls, the Rams seemed uncertain against Inglewood's aggressive trap press, and suddenly what had been a comfortable lead was cut to 47-45 when forward Tony Shaw connected on a 14-foot baseline basket at 3:00.

Centennial ousts Saints

By RICK ARTHUR
Staff Writer

Having met and conquered one Long Beach team, Centennial High probably will try to do it again next week.

The Apaches, 51-42 victors over host St. Anthony Friday night in the first round of the CIF 4-A basketball playoffs, will try their ambush act Tuesday against Poly—provided the top-seeded Jackrabbits dispose of Fontana tonight.

Centennial, the Bay League second-place team, used poise and speed to prevail against the Saints, the Angelus League co-champions.

Entering the contest with a 12-11 record, the Apaches, sparked by flashy 5-8 guard Lorenzo Watts, overcame an early six-point deficit, scored 14 points in a row in a span of 6:23 covering the second and third quarters, and survived a St. Anthony rally in the final minute.

The Jack Errion-coached Saints, who finished the season with a 13-12 record, had difficulty with a 2-1-2 zone defense and zone press that limited the efforts of guards Dave Ramsey and Lance Dietrich.

While neither team shot well from the field or from the free throw line, the key statistic may have been turnovers—only one for the Apaches and 12 for the Saints, indicating the effectiveness of the winners' press.

A Ralph Esposito layin, two free throws by Jim Donnelly, two outside jumpers by Ramsey and a 20-footer by Dietrich led to St. Anthony's biggest lead of the contest, a 10-4 advantage with 3:52 remaining in the first quarter.

Then Watts, bedazzling throughout the game with his swiftness and body control, scored his first of 17 points on a foul shot at 3:37, added a layin at 0:52 and handed off the first of six assists at 0:08 (Reggie Sirls scoring from underneath) to trim the deficit to 10-9 at the end of the period.

LBCC boosts title streak to 4, 77-74

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Long Beach City College wasn't acting like a team that had just clinched its fourth consecutive Metropolitan Conference basketball title Friday night.

There were no dunks in the shower, few congratulatory handshakes and no backslapping by the 12-man squad following a tight, 77-74 victory over Bakersfield before more than 1,500 appreciative fans.

Spokesmen Guy King and Dean Decker said the Vikings were taking the title in stride.

"We're winners. We have a tradition here. You know that," King said.

"I'm just glad this one is over."

said Decker. "This was more like a football game tonight."

Playmaker Decker stood at center court with friends discussing his second successive trip to the state junior college basketball playoffs in Fresno, March 11, and King, who tallied 23 points in the win, sauntered back and forth from the water fountain to the locker room. Forward Rod Dalton spoke of religion and food following his 14-point output.

The only thing that resembled a celebration was the cutting down of the net at the Vikings' side of the court. Reserve guard Jeff Peters won that honor, and following a boost from Doug Simmons tossed it into a crowd of well-wishers.

The only words of relief came from LBCC coach Bill Fraser.

"I'm deeply gratified," he said about his third title in as many years as Viking coach, "that we came back like we did under so much pressure. I was really distraught when we blew that two-game lead a week ago, but it's given me a great deal of satisfaction to see these guys come back with a great deal of courage."

The Renegades took advantage of the Vikings' carelessness in the final seven-and-one-half minutes and nearly threw the conference into a two-way tie between the Vikings and Pierce College, which demolished East Los Angeles, 102-77.

The Vikings held a 61-46 lead with 7:40 to go, but key steals by Nishell Jackson and reserve forward Thomas Wilson, and ensuing baskets by Jackson, Jon White and forward John Fox led the Vikings on a 27-14 run that forced Fraser to utilize several timeouts to slow the turnaround.

"I had to tell them the facts of life," he mused about his final timeout with less than a minute remaining. "I told them who to get the ball to and who was to take it out and what to do with it. They still didn't do it as I had planned."

Jackson's steal and lay-up with 34 seconds remaining cut the Vikings' lead to three, 75-72, but seconds later the former Panther fouled King as the 6-6 sophomore center attempted to slam-dunk his ninth field goal of the evening. King silenced the Renegades, hitting both free throws to give Long Beach a five-point advantage with 25 seconds remaining.

UCLA breezes, nears 10th title

BERKELEY (AP) — Marques Johnson hit on each of his 11 field goal attempts and all five of his free throw tries Friday night to score 27 points and lead UCLA to a 113-93 victory over California in a Pacific-8 Conference game.

The Bruins moved to within two games of their 10th successive Pac-8 championship by dominating the first half when they built a 61-38 lead. They were outscored, 55-52, in the second half, but their 113 total broke the Harmon Gym scoring record the Bruins set here in 1967.

"It was our best game this year, both offensively and defensively," coach Gene Bartow said.

Cal led 54 when UCLA ran off 11 points in a row—nine by Johnson—and gradually expanded its lead. The Bruins shot 66 per cent in the first half and 56 per cent from the floor for the game in what Cal coach Dick Edwards called an "awesome" display.

Rich Washington, who had 22 points for UCLA, led in rebounds with 10 as the Bruins outrebounded Cal, 51-31.

Center Dave Greenwood added 14 points to bring the UCLA front line total to 63, and guard Ray Townsend also hit for 14 including 5-for-5 on outside shots in the first half.

Senior guard Rickie Hawthorne paced Cal with 21 points, and Gene Ransom made 18, with 12 coming on free throws. Cal, 3-9 in Pac-8 play against UCLA's 10-2, made 46 per cent of its field goal attempts.

UCLA held a 26-point lead when the teams began large-scale substituting with about five minutes remaining.

The Bruins were jolted last weekend when Oregon beat them, 65-45, to end a 98-game winning string on the UCLA floor and keep

'Zubie baby' passes Hayden test

By DAVID LEVINSON

It had just been announced in New York and Los Angeles that in 1978 Zubia Mehta would become music director of the New York Philharmonic. The New York Times put its best musical minds to work on the story.

Harold Schonberg told the readers that Mehta was commonly believed to be weak in Haydn and Mozart but nifty in Richard Strauss, Arnold Schoenberg and today's avant-garde music. In general, the Timesman said, Mehta knows the standard symphony repertoire far better than Pierre Boulez, the current conductor of the New York Philharmonic. John Rockwell confided that, in contrast to the austere Boulez, Mehta is commonly known in Los Angeles as "Zubie baby."

THE Thursday night concert at the Music Center saw Mehta back on the Los Angeles Philharmonic podium for the first time since Jan. 4. There was an opportunity to test afresh at least part of Schonberg's report. The program was made up of Haydn's 83rd symphony, Morton Subotnick's brand-new "Before the Butterfly," and Beethoven's violin concerto.

Sure enough, the Haydn was brisk, clear and undistinguished. It is not Mehta's music, and while everything was in balance and there were no romantic swoops and glides, there was not much delicacy or nuance. But Mehta conducted it without score—a rare accomplishment for a work that is in one of the remoter corners of the standard repertoire.

Many conductors could make their way without a score in such a work, of course. All they'd have to do is memorize the major entrances of one section or another and keep the beat going. But Mehta had done more than that. He obviously knew every note.

HE CONDUCTED the Beethoven without score, too, and did just as well. That is a lesser accomplishment. But his share of the job was bolder and altogether more successful than the Haydn had been. The soloist was Ida Haendel, a Montreal violinist who got her early training and scored her early successes in Europe. This was her first Los Angeles appearance. She has a sweet, singing tone, and is clearly a first-rate musician. Her playing of the first movement was somewhat lacking in weight, though, and she took the concluding rondo at a slow pace that deprived it of exhilaration.

Mehta used a score for the Subotnick. Any conductor would have to. The work is extremely complex, and a conductor does a masterful job if he follows the score and gives all the cues. Mehta and the musicians gave the piece a confident, powerful reading.

"THIS IS the fifth and most recent of my works in the last four years to use the butterfly as a metaphor for the basis of the compositional procedures," Subotnick said in the program notes.

If the butterfly represents compositional procedures, the music can also be heard as representing the butterfly—or, in the case of the present work, as representing the moment before the butterfly emerges. This is literary music of a sort, but it is far removed from 19th century tone poems. Subotnick's music is not so much about butterflies as it is about butterflies. Subotnick's program notes, incidentally, are a marvel among those written by contemporary composers, who tend to provide highly intellectualized versions of the sort of drivel about "murmuring brooks" that high school music appreciation teachers once substituted for discussions of music. Subotnick tells us that the piece starts as "a slow evolution of the pitch G, expanding and contracting by quarter tones and gradually becoming large blocks of sound" that break up into a melody of sorts. In a second section, this "sea of G" dissolves into a chaos of rapid pulsation—another attempt of the butterfly to emerge. Finally the ideas of the first two sections are merged in "a suggestion of what the two together might become."

Even that description, and Subotnick's explanation of how loudness is regulated by violins equipped with microphones, is not likely to give a reader much idea of what the

And then there was the woman who clicked out a tune on false teeth

By BOB PROTZMAN
Rialto News Service

ST. PAUL—Round and round the country he goes, and when Ted Mack will stop emceeing amateur talent shows nobody knows.

Mack, now 72, spent 23 years hosting the Original Amateur Hour on radio (1948 to 1960) and television (48 to Sept. 30, 1970), and now he travels to college and university campuses and elsewhere participating in amateur talent shows.

Here recently to emcee an amateur talent show, said there have been some changes in his shows.

"We do a kind of 'get the book' thing now. Rather than a straight contest, we jazz it up for the people and have some fun."

Mack, who's seen "hundreds of thousands" of individuals and groups over his years of involvement with amateur talent, is proud of the fact that many of today's stars were Amateur Hour contestants.

"The American Guild of Variety Artists (says that at least 40 per cent of its members were on the show," he said. He tried to recall some of the bigger names who had appeared on the show—Ann-Margret, George Carlin, Pat Boone, Greg Garrison (producer of Dean Martin's television show), Beverly Sills, Robert Merrill (12 Metropolitan Opera members were on the show, he said), and so many more, he gets tired of trying to recall them.

He likes to talk, too, about the ones who got away. "We threw Elvis Presley out of the auditions, because we thought his gyrations were too raunchy for a family audience," he recalled. "Tiny Tim auditioned 10 times, but we never let him on." He also recalled that Ann-Margret lost out in the competition to "a kid who played a tune on a laurel leaf."

Mack's often asked about the most absurd acts to audition or get on the show and he has as much difficulty naming those as he does recalling famous graduates, but he had a couple.

"There was a Hindu fakir who stuck a hatpin through his hand and tongue and lay on a bed of glass, but he was not accepted for the show.

I asked our auditioning staff why and they replied, 'Cuz he bleeds like a stuck pig.' Then I remembered the old lady who was playing the fiddle. When she finished played, she took out her false teeth and started clicking out a tune on them and tap dancing to the music."

If Mack maintained his composure during that one, he could handle just about anything. And he apparently did, or the camera never caught him laughing at any of the performers, no matter how ridiculous the act. He is remembered by most, instead, as kindly and encouraging toward everyone. "Well, the kids were out there knocking themselves out, so it wasn't hard for me to be nice to them," he said.

The "original" Amateur Hour started on radio in 1935 and was hosted by Major Bowes, so the show had a lifespan of 36 years. In the 23 years that Mack hosted it, he had only six different sponsors, and one of those, Geritol, was with him for 13 seasons.

"We were on Sunday evenings toward the end and started getting hurt by football," Mack recalled. "The games would cut into our time slot. By the time the network decided to give us a different time and day, I wasn't interested."

Mack, acknowledging that there seems to be a tremendous interest now in amateur talent contests, said he doesn't know if he'd want to go back on the air with a show, although a number of independent producers have approached him about doing a show.

Meanwhile, Mack, who lives in Westchester County, N.Y., continues to travel around the country. "I'm still having a lot of fun," he said.

But he wasn't told Radar lookout charges dropped

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

The Long Beach city prosecutor's office has dropped charges against Jimmy Dunn, the San Pedro man arrested for displaying a sign warning motorists of "Radar Ahead."

Dunn, however, was not pleased—mostly because nobody told him the charges had been dropped until he'd missed a day of work, sitting in court waiting vainly for his case to be called.

"Were it not for the fact that I have an arrest on my record, I'd pretty much be willing to call it a Mexican standoff," said Dunn.

"That, and that those (people) didn't tell me I didn't have to come to court this morning," he added.

Dunn was arrested last Monday afternoon at the foot of the Long Beach Freeway, on Sixth Street, for carrying a placard warning motorists of the presence of a police radar unit.

Police called that "interfering with an officer" and booked the 37-year-old commercial diver on that charge.

He coughed up $50—the price of a $500 bail bond—and rolled up his sleeves for a fight at his arraignment, scheduled Friday morning before Municipal Court Judge J. Merrill Lilley.

Soon after making bail, Dunn spent a morning at the local law library, researching his case and preparing a legal motion on his claim of false arrest.

He then headed for San Diego and a diving job scheduled to last the week, but on Thursday night he drove back to San Pedro. Friday morning, he showered, shaved, put on a suit and came to court.

He sat in the crowded courtroom and watched the crowd slowly disappear as the judge conducted a couple dozen arraignments. He was left in an empty gallery when the judge left the bench.

"They never called my name, so I had to go up to the bailiff and ask, 'Hey, is he done?' The bailiff said 'Yes.'"

So Dunn went downstairs to the records office where he learned the city prosecutor's office had declined to file charges against him.

City Prosecutor Robert Parkin explained, meanwhile, that the complaint was rejected because "just the act of holding up a sign is not interfering with an officer."

"You know," added Parkin, "you can make out a pretty good argument for the guy doing a public service, slowing down the traffic."

Later, a reporter calling Parkin for a comment on Dunn's court wait was left on "hold" for 15 minutes. The reason: Jimmy Dunn was on another line, bending Parkin's ear.

"I apologized to him for the fact that he had to come in," said

Parkin. "He's right and he may have a point that he wasn't notified..."

Parkin said that notifying arrested persons that no charges are being filed is "just one of those things that nobody does" as each case is processed through police and prosecutor to court.

Frequently in such cases, Parkin said, bail bondsmen pass the word. And Dunn acknowledged that, for at least part of the week, no one was at his home to receive the news.

"Considering the volume of cases that come through here, the number of people who suffer what Mr. Dunn did is very small," said Parkin.

Earlier, Dunn said he still was considering consulting an attorney to see if any record of the arrest could be erased. "It's the old story," he said, "of 'don't tread on me if you don't want to get bit on the leg.'"

Judge change requested in Dr. Cella trial

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr. and two former administrators of hospitals he controlled sought Friday to disqualify Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Jerrold L. Oliver from presiding at their trial on 127 counts each in an indictment by the Orange County Grand Jury.

Cella and three other men—Theodore Schiffman, 53, his business manager; Stephen R. Evans, 31, and George Ollendorf, 44—are accused in identical charges that they siphoned almost $2 million from Mission Community Hospital at Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana.

Schiffman refused to join in the challenge of the judge.

That was the procedure followed when County Supervisor Robert Battin challenged Judge Kenneth Lae's ability to remain unbiased in hearing seven grand-jury charges against him.

Another judge considered the defense claims of bias and prejudice and ruled that Lae could sit on the case without injuring the defendant's right to a fair trial.

Lae now is presiding over a lengthy pretrial hearing in which Battin is seeking dismissal of charges that he used his county-paid staff in an unsuccessful campaign to get the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

CELLA, who became known in 1974 as the state's major political benefactor, has said he invested about $500,000 in political races.

Battin received some of Cella's largesse—which the grand jury said came from falsified records, bills and collections involving the two hospitals.

Oliver agreed to a defense motion that the grand jury's transcripts should remain at least temporarily sealed. He said he would hear arguments on a motion to permanently seal the records on March 22.

Tom Crosby, attorney for Schiffman, said his client might want to call Oliver as a witness during the trial.

He did not explain how that could be accomplished if Oliver is presiding over the case.

LBCEO receives new grant for 6 programs

A six-month progress report by new Director Bud Weisbart and an outline of a community-needs survey have been presented to the board of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunity.

Weisbart said the commission was operating on an overall 10 per cent administrative overhead and has secured in the past six months $319,854 in increased funds for six programs. These are two nutrition programs, family planning, Head Start, manpower and energy conservation.

In addition, he said, an annual report of individuals helped by the commission's services through November 1975 included emergency assistance, 3,039; ex-law offenders, 480; Head Start, 80; health care, 11,293; housing assistance, 528; manpower, 10,988; American Indians, 245; senior citizens, 35,068; transportation, 4,018, and youth, 2,389.

The survey, headed by staff member Mike Guichard, is being conducted by eight Long Beach State University students making random samples of low-income families in five geographical areas of the city. The object of the survey is to provide a base upon which agency priorities may be established.

Questions include the adequacy and availability of health care, emergency services, housing, recreation, child care and job counseling and training.

Westside sampling has been completed, the downtown area is 80 per cent complete, the eastside 60 per cent finished and the entire survey is scheduled to be completed in March.

In other matters, the board heard a request for clearance of $9,000 needed to carry the North Long Beach Neighborhood Center's Daymon House rehabilitation project through next June. It was referred to committees. A report is due at the next meeting of the group in March.

Gold compounds still best for arthritis

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Gold compounds remain the best medications available for rheumatoid arthritis, a medical specialist says.

Gold therapy, not a new treatment, was recommended during a lecture to doctors at Long Beach Community Hospital.

Dr. James G. Gitlin, a rheumatologist of Huntington Beach, said that other medications reduce pain and inflammation.

But gold induces remissions (symptom abatement) and prevents further damage to joints, Gitlin said. In addition, it can promote healing of erosive changes in the joint area.

Rheumatoid arthritis is a chronic disorder characterized by joint inflammation and resulting in deterioration of certain joint structures.

Gitlin said gold is administered by intramuscular injection. It is a long-term treatment and begins with an injection every week for the first 20 weeks.

He cautioned that gold compounds should be administered only by physicians who have had "experience in using this form of treatment." Gold therapy can cause toxic reactions in many patients.

Gitlin, who is affiliated with the department of rheumatology at UC Irvine College of Medicine, noted there was no cure for rheumatoid arthritis at present but added:

"There are enough forms of therapy to control the disease in a majority of patients."

One new drug to combat pain and inflammation is due for release next month, he said. He identified it as naproxen. The drug is known in other countries as Naprosyn.

But he warned that the new drug "won't be a cure."

In fact, he said, there won't be a cure until the cause is known.

"The puzzle has not yet been put together," he remarked.

Gitlin said that $400 million was spent annually on quack devices and drugs. It would be helpful if that same money could be directed into medical research activity, he added.

As of now, there are 20 million arthritics requiring care. Ten per cent of the U. S. population is affected by some form of a rheumatic disorder.

Arthritis is not a single disorder, he reminded. There are 80 to 100 rheumatic diseases that may cause arthritis.

Aspirin remains a highly beneficial drug to treat arthritis, he said. Many patients take up to 30 aspirin a day for several years with no side effects whatever.

For reasons not understood, arthritics who take lots of aspirin don't suffer as many side effects from the drug as might be expected, Gitlin said.

Carmelitos housing site called remnant of past

Carmelitos Housing Project is "a remnant of the past" and should be redeveloped into a mix of low, moderate and senior-citizen housing which blends with the surrounding area, according to the League of Women Voters of Long Beach.

Mrs. Ina Aronow, league president, said the league has urged the Los Angeles County Housing Authority to follow such a plan, and also to use federal programs to re-house some Carmelitos tenants in scattered subsidized units.

"The City of Long Beach has been quite successful at administering scattered site assisted housing and can easily expand this program to house part of the Carmelitos population," Mrs. Aronow said in a letter which will be on the City Council agenda Tuesday.

Through studies by the League of Women Voters, she said, it was found that inadequate housing is one of the basic causes of social unrest.

Downtown group reelects Neighbors

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Long-time civic leader Darrell Neighbors, who in the 1950s led the city's fight against subsidence, has been reelected chairman of the Project Area Committee for Long Beach's downtown redevelopment project.

President of Jotham Bixby Co. and secretary-treasurer of the Bixby Land Co., he has been in business in the downtown area since 1929 and terms its planned revitalization his "most challenging pursuit yet."

Wheeler Abbott, owner of Peppermint Pushcard Florist, 19 Long Beach Blvd., was retained as vice chairman of the 21-member citizens' committee.

Robert Smythe, newly elected PAC member, was named secretary-treasurer, filling the vacancy left by Robert A. Wenzel, who in April will retire as vice president and manager of United California Bank, a position which Smythe will assume.

Reelected to represent residents in the project area were Otto Beck, 600 E. Ocean Blvd.; Jack Jacobs, 666 E. Ocean Blvd.; and Archie Miller, 206 Long Beach Blvd. Elected as a new residential member was Larry Lana, 666 E. Ocean Blvd.

In addition to Smythe those named to represent businesses in the downtown area were Murray Kramer, realtor; Robert Baird, manager of the Ocean Centers Building; Joyce Johnson, owner of Unique and Obsolete, 131 E. Fourth St.; and Donovan Rodman, Rodman Realty, 22 Elm Ave. The latter two were re-elected.

Also reelected were the Rev. Bruce V. Talbert, First Congregational Church, and Douglas Ben-well, representing Downtown Long Beach Associates.

In addition to Abbott and Neighbors, those remaining on the committee by virtue of their two-year terms include Mrs. Norma L. Bradt, 666 E. Ocean Blvd.; and Mrs. Allie Drazanovich, 141 Elm Ave., representing residents; Dwight E. Bennett, Long Beach Chamber of Commerce; and Bonnie Helton, Free Enterprise Association, representing associations.

Also, Ben F. Marron, realtor, 400 E. First St.; William K. Rapp, Bill Rapp's Chevron Station, 300 W. Ocean Blvd.; James B. Russell Jr., a partner in Pray, Price, Williams & Russell, 555 E. Ocean Blvd.; Jack Spears, owner of K & S. Instruments, 405 Long Beach Blvd.; and Charles B. Stuart, owner of Security Prescription Pharmacy, 110 Pine Ave., representing businesses.

30 SOUGHT TO AUDITION FOR PLAY

Thirty actors and actresses, including two small children with acrobatic skills, are being sought by Long Beach's Ha'Penny Players for their upcoming production of "The Flying Prince."

Auditions will be held Monday and Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Recreation Center, 350 E. Ocean Blvd.

Rehearsals for the play, the Recreation Department's major spring production, will begin March 8 under the direction of Dave Barton. Seven performances will be staged between May 7 and 22, Barton said.

Barton described "The Flying Prince," written by Aurand Harris, as a classic East Indian legend. He said he was looking for actors between 16 and 65 and actresses from 14 through 25.

There are no singing roles in "The Flying Prince," in contrast to earlier Ha'Penny Players productions of "Cinderella" and "Oliver," but there are numerous dance sequences, which will be choreographed by Albert Ruiz.

Barton said special auditions would be held later for dancers.

Industry Week

Job interviews now bias-free

This doesn't mean you have to hire unqualified people, but it does mean you may have to prove the educational requirements you're demanding are absolutely necessary for the job.

SINCE THAT SUPREME COURT ruling, almost every criterion for selecting employees has come under review — everything from the way you greet job applicants to the tests you give them. The rules are complicated, Industry Week admits, but the net result is that you can't ask applicants anything that isn't directly related to the applicant's ability to perform the job in question.

You can't, for example, ask where the applicant's father works, because you're not hiring the father. You can't ask personal questions about marital status, number of children, or even home address — unless you want to leave yourself wide open for a possible discrimination charge. In fact, you can't even ask applicants about any past criminal record unless you're hiring for bank or similar work, the magazine for managers points out.

ANY QUESTION IS SUSPECT if it has a "disparate" (discriminatory) effect on any group or groups of applicants. And in investigating an employee complaint, if the government finds an effect, the burden of proof shifts to the employer, who must prove his selection practices aren't discriminatory.

One effect of these rulings, Industry Week explains, is a sharp reduction in the number of firms that use formal tests in the hiring process. There are many valid tests available, but validation (proving tests do, in fact, measure what they're supposed to) can be a costly process.

Savings & loans inflow mark set

SAN FRANCISCO — January marked the first billion dollar month of savings inflows in history for savings and loan associations in Arizona, California and Nevada, shattering the previous monthly high of $897 million set in May 1975, the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco said Thursday.

The strength in savings flows, which characterized most of 1975, has gained new impetus in early 1976 as interest rates on short-term open market

FIRE DEPARTMENT divers search through debris-strewn pool at Long Beach YWCA where roof suddenly collapsed on swimmers, killing one and injuring several Friday night.

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Half the ceiling over the Long Beach YWCA swimming pool collapsed suddenly Friday evening, killing a young mother and injuring four swimmers at the weekly recreational swim night.

The wooden false roof, installed about eight years ago, fell in a heap on the shallow end of the pool, covering several paddlers and instantly killing Mrs. Jo Spinelli, 28, 120 Esperanza Drive.

Her husband, John, 53, and her daughter, Linda, 5, were treated for minor injuries at St. Mary Medical Center and released. Also treated at St. Mary and released were Mrs. Sarah Gibson, 57, of Long Beach; Cho Kumye, 18, a relative of Mrs. Spinelli, and Peter Tolton, 12, 6151 Cherry Ave.

The ceiling of the "Y" at 550 Pacific Ave. collapsed so suddenly that few swimmers had time to respond to the danger, according to witnesses. However, lifeguard Doreen Kocher, 18, said she heard a crackling, rumbling noise that sounded like an earthquake and yelled "Get under the water!" Then she dove in and helped pull several swimmers to the side.

Two 12-year-olds, regular Friday night swimmers, were trapped under heavy wood panels but clawed and kicked their way to freedom.

Peter Tolton, 6151 Cherry Ave., said he had just submerged, wearing a face mask, when he was hit on the back and saw an arm around his neck. He said: "I looked up and there was no light. I breathed through my mask and pushed this lady over to the side. She was OK. ... I was scared."

George Shuman, of 464 Adair St., Peter's companion, also was trapped under the falling debris and had his arm pinned by a heavy board. He pulled free, however, and, along with Peter, nursed cuts and scrapes.

The building, erected in 1925, fails to comply with current city earthquake codes, according to the City Building Department.

Only about 15 swimmers were there Friday; last week there were more than 40.

The accident drew rescue units from the Long Beach Fire Department, Police Department and four city lifeguards, who made frequent dives before the pool was emptied and firemen hacked their way through the timbers and metal girders.

YWCA Executive Director Astrid Simsarian, who arrived shortly after the accident to survey the scene, exclaimed: "It's unbelievable. I feel such a personal tragedy for the woman who died. The place has been inspected regularly by the Building Department since I've been here. We had no idea there was anything amiss. I can't say what we'll do, but I would doubt if it will be repaired."

A coroner's deputy, who arrived shortly after the accident, said he felt the collapse was caused by a structural defect. "All the humidity in here could eventually erode the false ceiling," he suggested.

Compounds in air top 2 million

Cancer rise tied to environment

By JEFFREY ANTEVIL
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—The incidence of cancer in the United States has more than doubled since 1900, and there has been almost no improvement in survival rates in the past 25 years, the President's Council on Environmental Quality reported Friday.

In a massive and far-reaching study on ecology, energy, population trends and other issues, the council cited estimates that between 60 and 90 per cent of all cancer is related to environmental factors, many of them man-made.

It said thousands of chemical compounds are added each year to the 2 million already known. Little is known about many of the new ones which are introduced into the environment, but it is likely that many are contributing to cancer and other human ailments, the council said.

It said most cancer-causing agents (carcinogens) in the environment are found in the workplace. Although there usually is a 15 to 40-year lag between cause and effect, it said, there is no indication that long-term exposure to carcinogens is necessary to produce cancer and even "a single exposure to a chemical" may do so.

The council said the huge jump in mortality caused by cancer and heart disease—which increased from 12 per cent of all deaths in 1900 to more than half now—accounted for the virtual leveling off of the average American's life span, despite a decline in infant deaths and continuing medical advances in many fields.

In a message to Congress accompanying the report, President Ford emphasized its conclusion that efforts to clean up the nation's polluted air and water were producing "encouraging results."

Rejecting claims that environmental progress is in conflict with a strong economy and an adequate energy supply, Ford said the country must insure that new energy sources and technologies "meet environmental standards."

The 763-page report said air quality had improved "greatly" in the past five years and action against water pollution has shown progress. Nevertheless, it said the national water pollution control program is behind schedule, and large polluters such as industry and municipalities probably will need additional time to meet federal guidelines.

Economy in sharp upswing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The index compiled by the government to signal the nation's economic future showed its strongest gain in six months during January, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

And reflecting the impact of the recovery on U.S. international trade, the department also reported the first monthly trade deficit in a year last month.

Taken together, the two statistics indicate a recovery, growing domestic economy where consumers are now buying imported goods faster than U.S. business is selling goods abroad.

The U.S. recovery, after a strong spurt last spring in rebounding from the recession, leveled off in late summer and early winter. But the performance of the composite index was a hopeful sign that the recovery has now established a solid base and is ready for the second phase of expansion.

The initial recovery was primarily the product of consumer spending stimulated by federal tax cuts and rebates. The latest statistics reinforced earlier indications of a possible upswing in business spending and investment.

The department said its composite index of a dozen individual economic indicators climbed by 2.2 per cent in January, or more than the 2.1 per cent it had risen over the previous five months combined. It was the steepest rise since the 2.5 per cent jump in July.

The trade account, meanwhile, showed a $72.6 million deficit, marking the first time imports have exceeded exports since last January's $262.1 million deficit. The latest deficit followed a surplus of $724.2 million in December and $11.05 billion surplus for all of 1975.

Hero object of gang abuse

By JERRY RUCK
Associated Press

In the days of the Hardy Boys heroism brought esteem. For 10-year-old Leon President it's meant death threats and beatings.

Leon has received a Los Angeles Police Commission citation and a pair of real handcuffs for helping to capture a juvenile bandit suspect last fall with a pair of toy cuffs.

But his mother, Kathy President, said Friday she is sending her son to live with his father in another city for his own protection.

"IT'S MOSTLY the teen-age gangs," she said. "It's not too good. The best thing is to send him somewhere until things cool off."

Mrs. President said Leon has been beaten and threatened with death by the gangs in Hollywood. He is now escorted to and from school by her 19-year-old stepson, she said.

"He's not afraid of them," she said. "He just wishes they'd leave him alone. A lot of pressure's been on him and it will be good for him to get away." It began last September when Leon became suspicious of the sudden affluence of four neighborhood friends. He knew that several elderly residents of a Hollywood apartment house had been burglarized recently.

HE ASKED his friends about it and they offered him $11 to keep his mouth shut. He took the money to the Hollywood police station and accompanied officers to an address where two boys, 10 and 11, were arrested. Then to another address where a 12-year-old girl was arrested.

A 12-year-old boy tried to escape officers, but Leon yanked him off a bicycle bought with stolen loot and manacled him with his toy handcuffs.

Leon is only 4-feet-6 and weighs 90 pounds. The boy he captured was 8 inches taller and 35 pounds heavier. Leon said it was nothing.

Panel will ask lower cut in tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee agreed Friday to recommend a tax cut of no more than $20.6 billion in 1977 — $8.5 billion below what President Ford proposed.

Ending a week of work on its spending and tax plans for next year, the committee agreed with its chairman, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., that the $8.5 billion would be better "spent" on social programs than on tax cuts.

ACTUALLY, the $8.5 billion exists only as a figure in Ford's budget. The committee actions mean that the money would be used to reduce the federal deficit — which the committee would increase by $8.5 billion to pay for the social programs.

The net effect: —Congress could not be accused in an election year of adding to the record high federal deficit. The Finance Committee proposal contemplates the same $45.9-billion deficit as does Ford's amended budget.

Patty meeting with Weather leader told

By RONALD KOZIOL
Knight News Service

SAN FRANCISCO—Patricia Hearst, presently on trial for bank robbery charges here, has told of meeting a top leader of the violent Weather Underground after her cross-country flight in 1974, the Knight News Service learned Friday.

Miss Hearst's disclosure of the meeting with Kathy Boudin in a New York City apartment in mid-June 1974 was the first confirmed connection between the Weather Underground and the Symbionese Liberation Army, the tiny guerrilla band that kidnaped the college co-ed and allegedly forced her into the life of a revolutionary.

Federal sources, as well as others close to Miss Hearst's defense team, have confirmed that the 22-year-old heiress has told of meeting Miss Boudin, sought since 1970 for a series of terrorist activities in New York City and Chicago.

Miss Boudin, 32, is considered by authorities to be one of the top five leaders of the Weather group, which went underground in early 1970 and embarked on a wave of bombings aimed mostly at government facilities across the country.

The meeting is reported to have taken place in the Upper West Side apartment of sports activist Jack Scott, who was aiding Miss Hearst and SLA members William Harris, and his wife, Emily, in preparing a book.

During her recent court testimony, Miss Hearst told of being taken by car by Scott from Berkeley to his New York City apartment, where she spent two days before being moved to a farmhouse hideout in New Canaan, Pa.

It was at the apartment that she also met for the first time Wendy Yoshi-

Patty not converted by SLA, doctor says

By THEO WILSON
Knight News Service

SAN FRANCISCO—Patricia Hearst was "never a convert" of the Symbionese Liberation Army, and when she raised her fist in the guerrilla salute after her capture it was her "last gasp of compliance and profound confusion," Dr. Robert Jay Lifton testified for her defense Friday.

Lifton, billed as an expert on persuasive coercion and thought control, said that from the moment the young heiress was kidnaped she became a victim of the same terrifying controls that reduced hundreds of Americans and Europeans in Red Chinese prison camps to completely "compliant" subjects.

"IF CAPTORS are sufficiently motivated, they can break down anyone," the psychiatrist told jurors in the bank-robbery trial. He said Miss Hearst, kidnaped at 19, "not yet formed as an adult, vulnerable to every kind of fear," was more susceptible to coercion than any of the hundreds of persons he has studied in the last 26 years.

Lifton, who told the jurors Patty remained a "coerced" captive of William and Emily Harris after the rest of the SLA was killed, revealed in cross-examination later that the defendant had been in Sacramento sometime between the fall of 1974 and her arrest last September.

It was the first time the jurors heard that Patty had been in Sacramento during the "missing year" in her life with the Harris. She took the Fifth Amendment 42 times to prevent questioning about that period, since she is under investigation for a Sacramento bank robbery last April in which a woman customer was killed.

THE psychiatrist told Asst. U.S. Atty. David Bancroft that he asked her about her everyday activities and she told him about "military drills, self-criticism sessions and physical activities."

"She told me about her encounters with Wendy

Yoshimura, which began in the East and continued in Sacramento and the Bay Area," Lifton said. "Also about her 'struggle' sessions with the Harris, when there was supposed to be mutual criticism, but she was always under attack," Miss Yoshimura was arrested with Patty at the apartment they shared here.

Lifton also revealed that Miss Yoshimura, who had been a fugitive for three years on charges unrelated to the Hearst case, had written to her parents, and when Bill Harris wanted her to stop, wrote the letters in Japanese. Patty

Worker claims he's kidnaped Lindbergh son

Combined News Services

A New England factory worker claiming to be the kidnaped son of Charles A. Lindbergh has asked a Hawaii court to name him an heir to the famed aviator's estate.

Lawyers for Kenneth Kerwin filed suit this week in U.S. Circuit Court on Maui Island, where Lindbergh died in 1974 and where his estate is in probate. A hearing is scheduled March 9 on a motion to move the case to Honolulu.

Kerwin's lawyers refused to disclose his whereabouts, saying only that he lived in the Northeastern United States. Reporters in Maine discovered that he works for a sportswear company in Springvale, Maine, but he is now vacationing at an undisclosed spot.

Kerwin's suit maintains that he is Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. and was kidnaped in 1932 by a family named Kerwin. Bruno Richard Hauptmann was convicted in 1935 of the kidnaping and murder of the child and executed the following year.

Members of the Lindbergh family and their Honolulu attorney, Daniel Case, were unavailable for comment on the suit.

Robert Bryan, a Birmingham, Ala., attorney, said he has spent four years checking Kerwin's story. He said Kerwin's parents told him in 1948 "who he really is."

Kerwin wrote to Anne Morrow Lindbergh and went to the Lindbergh home in Darien, Conn., on a Christmas Day in the early 1960s, Bryan said. But the Lindberghs refused to talk to him.

The family also declined two written invitations to meet with Kerwin, Bryan said.

Court documents show the Lindbergh estate is valued at less than $300,000.

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — A government report said Friday that squeezing oil from shale and synthetic fuels from coal will probably do more environmental damage than established means of supplying the country with fuel. The President's Council on Environmental Quality said drilling, piping and refining oil "is less polluting than shale oil and liquids from coal." President Ford has strongly supported private development of shale oil and synthetic fuels by proposing up to $5 billion in federal guarantees for companies interested in taking the risk. The council's report marks a low-key break with administration policy, by saying it might be better to find new and improved ways of drilling for oil.

Attica dismissal

BUFFALO, N.Y. — After four years of investigation and prosecution, the criminal cases stemming from the bloody 1971 Attica prison revolt came to a virtual close Friday when a judge threw out charges against five men. Only one case remains unresolved. Justice Carman Ball of State Supreme Court said he reluctantly agreed to a recommendation by the chief Attica prosecutor and in the interest of justice dismissed charges pending against a state policeman and four former Attica inmates. The chief prosecutor had urged the court Thursday to throw out all remaining indictments except for a murder charge against a former prisoner. Of the 43 persons killed in the five-day rebellion, 39 died in the police assault on the final day.

Mail cuts hit

WASHINGTON — Some members of Congress and leaders of postal unions said Friday that the country would not accept a cutback in mail delivery to three days a week. Three-day-a-week delivery is among the options open to the deficit-plagued Postal Service in its campaign to cut costs. J. T. Ellington, a senior assistant postmaster general, disclosed in an interview. Ellington said "our most immediate option" is eliminating delivery on Saturday or one other day of the week. Postal officials had previously said they were considering such a move. Eliminating delivery on Saturday would save $350 million per year and the savings would be somewhat higher if delivery were dropped on a business day.

Mussolini

Thieves raided the chapel tomb of Fascist dictator Benito Mussolini early Friday and stole a small urn containing a piece of his brain, police in the northern Italian hill village of Predappio said.

The theft came 10 years after Mussolini's wife Rachele, now 86, won a 20-year fight to have the brain fragment returned from a U.S. Army hospital in Washington where it was studied by psychiatrists.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the theft, but authorities theorized the raiders either were leftist extremists who wanted to deface the tomb or were simply souvenir hunters.

Police said the raid on the tomb was the most damaging since Mussolini was buried there in 1957, the only one of the World War II Axis leaders to have a tomb. They said that in addition to stealing the brain fragment, the thieves smashed glass display cases around the tomb and stole several of Mussolini's military hats.

In 1971, an explosive device blew down the chapel's gate and damaged the ceiling.

Confiscated

Chicago police have confiscated a 1973 black luxury automobile belonging to "Welfare Queen" Linda Taylor.

Police seized the car Friday under an Illinois law which permits confiscation of a motor vehicle believed used in committing a crime.

Mrs. Taylor was charged Wednesday with burglary for allegedly removing $800 worth of goods — including a fur coat, television, diamond ring and kitchen appliances from her old to her new home. She is also awaiting trial on charges of defrauding the state out of $7,000 in public aid funds, and has been charged with child neglect of her two sons — Willie, 7 and Jose, 5 — who have been placed with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

She also faces an April 1 circuit court appearance on charges of perjury and theft in connection with alleged welfare fraud.

Clots

Svea Wallenda, a member of the famous Wallenda highwire family, was being treated for blood clots on the brain Friday at Bernalillo County Medical Center in Albuquerque, N.M.

Relatives said Wallenda, 26, had complained of headaches and loss of memory since being struck by a car three weeks ago in Las Vegas.

His half brother, Jimmy Christner, said, "Doctors are going to give him a drug to prevent blackouts, but it's going to mess up his balance. The doctor said if he goes on the wire again he would probably fall off."

Christner said Wallenda injured his neck and back four years ago in a fall from a tightrope. He said a year ago Wallenda received head injuries while practicing acrobatic stunts.

Kidnaped

The 8-year-old son of well-to-do Houston salesman was kidnaped Friday and held for a $1 million ransom until he escaped from the locked car trunk where he was held eight hours, police said.

Authorities said a man was arrested in the abduction.

Colin Kerr, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Kerr, was kidnaped about noon while fishing with some boys near his home in Friendswood, an upper middle class community near Houston. The father is a salesman for a nuts and bolts manufacturer.

Friendswood police said the abductor had demanded $1 million in cash for the safe return of the boy. But police said young Kerr escaped from the trunk of a car while the automobile was parked at a drive-in grocery store. They said a man was arrested in some bushes at a park on the city's southwest side.

Bolshoi

Appointment of Georgi A. Ivanov as director of the Bolshoi Theater was announced Friday in Moscow, marking the first time in memory that the head of the famous ballet and opera house has come from outside the music world. Ivanov, a 56-year-old administrator, has been chosen to replace Kirill Molchanov, a composer who had been director since early 1974, Tass announced.

The Soviet news agency said Molchanov resigned for "health reasons," but rumors surfaced months ago that Molchanov had been ousted, possibly because of unhappiness with his compositions. His opera creation "The Dawns Are Quiet Here" was heavily panned by U.S. critics when the company toured the country last summer.

Liaison

Thomas S. Gates, the last secretary of Defense in the Eisenhower administration, will be named shortly by President Ford to head the U.S. liaison office in Peking, government sources said Friday night in Washington.

Gates, who will be 70 in April, will take over from George Bush, who now heads the Central Intelligence Agency. The only other liaison chief since an accommodation was reached with the People's Republic of China was David Bruce, a veteran diplomat who is now retired from the foreign service.

Gates, an investment banker, served for seven years in high-level defense positions under the late President Eisenhower, including those of secretary of the Navy and, beginning in December 1959, secretary of Defense.

Bankrupt

B. J. Thomas, the singer who recorded the 1970 hit "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," has petitioned for bankruptcy in federal court in Dallas.

The petition filed with the court Thursday did not mention Thomas' current assets and liabilities, but his lawyer, James Pleasant, said that information would follow within 10 days.

Thomas' other top recordings included "Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song," "Rock and Roll Lullaby" and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

Embarrassed

The Arena Stage Company of Washington has won a Broadway Tony award but may not get it during a national television show because of sponsor embarrassment over premature leak of the news.

The special award for distinguished work is the first ever given a resident troupe outside New York. The 25-year-old organization was picked for the honor by the American Theatre Critics Association cooperating with the League of New York Theatres and Producers which makes the annual awards.

Announcement of the Arena Stage citation was to have been made after nominations in 16 competitive categories are disclosed on March 24. Alternate winners are to be revealed during a two-hour telecast April 18.

A member of the Critic's Association disclosed the award in the London Times, however, with ensuing pickup of the item by Washington papers. Alexander Cohen, producer of the program for the league, said that as a result it was now "very marginal" whether the actual presentation would be done on the air.

Checkup

Britain's Princess Anne entered a London hospital Friday night for what a Buckingham Palace spokesman described as a "routine checkup."

The spokesman denied rumors that the 25-year-old princess might be pregnant. The palace has denied such rumors several times in the past year.

Anne's husband, Army Capt. Mark Phillips, was at their home at Sandhurst military academy.

Retiring

Ending a long career as a professional hunter of Communists and "fellow travelers," J.G. Sourwine retired Friday still asserting that "we are the No. 1 target" of a Communist conspiracy to dominate the world and that "subversion continues" in and outside the government.

Since the early 1950s the former Reno newspaperman, now 68, had been chief counsel of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee. Sourwine competed with the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy in attempting to expose Communist influence.

His investigations included those of prominent journalists in 1955 and Owen Lattimore, the Johns Hopkins expert on China. Sourwine resigned briefly to enter the Nevada race for the Senate but lost in the primary.

Indigent

Joseph "Yellow Kid" Well, swindle king of the Roaring 20s, has been caught short of funds in death.

The man whose schemes netted an estimated $8 million in his 40 years as a con artist didn't have enough money left to be buried in his family's plot Friday in Chicago.

Weil, who died a welfare patient in a convalescent home Thursday at the age of 100, had only $195.

The Yellow Kid, who once said he spent all his money as a high-living traveler, was buried in a wooden casket covered with grey cloth at the Archer Woods Memorial Park in the Chicago suburb of Willow Springs. The park agreed to bury him for $150.

Guitarist

Carlos Toadvine, better known as Little Enis, died Friday of a heart attack while visiting his sister at Pompano Beach, Fla. He was 40.

He came to Lexington in the early 1950s after having been on the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn., billed as a "left-handed, upside-down guitar picker." He worked in Lexington night clubs for many years, but he had curtailed his appearances recently after suffering an earlier heart attack.

Honorary

Mary Pickford, a founder of the Motion Picture Academy and winner of the second Oscar for best actress, has been voted an honorary award to be presented at the Oscar telecast March 29.

Miss Pickford, who has been a recluse in recent years, was cited for "her unique contributions to the film industry and the development of film as an artistic medium." She her film debut in 1909 and starred in more than 200 movies, the last in 1933.

Coma

Jackie Wilson is still in a coma in a hospital room at Cherry Hill, N.J., Medical Center as he has been since Sept. 29 when the singer collapsed on the stage of the Latin Casino. Wilson, one of the big names in rock 'n' roll during the Fifties, had just finished singing "Lonely Teardrops" when he suffered an apparent heart attack.

A hospital spokesman said his condition has remained unchanged. "He's in a coma. He could wake up today or in a year from now. We'll just have to wait."

20,000 flee Angola war

Sahara republic

KINSHASA, Zaire — Between 15,000 and 20,000 refugees including white Portuguese settlers fled Angola to southern Zaire in the past month as Soviet-backed forces of the Popular Movement (MPLA) swept up to Zaire's border, government officials said Friday. A senior official in Matadi, in southwestern Zaire, said 11,000 of those who fled Angola did so between Feb. 15 and 24, when the MPLA offensive was at its height. Half the refugees were peasants and the remainder were traders and local officials together with their wives and children, the official said. Although the majority came from northern Angola, some had trekked hundreds of miles from central and even southern Angola where the MPLA has ousted pro-Western factions from all major towns.

U.S. bombing claimed

BANGKOK, Thailand — Cambodia charged Friday that U.S. warplanes bombed Siem Reap in northwestern Cambodia two days ago, killing 15 persons and wounding 40 others. The Cambodian report, broadcast Friday by the Rhiom Penh radio station and monitored here, said that two separate attacks by what were described as F3 jets occurred in the morning and afternoon of Feb. 25 on Siem Reap and its airport, the planes tuning north toward Thailand after they had allegedly dropped their bombs. It was believed that the planes to which the Cambodian broadcast referred were F111 jets whose figures could be mistaken for the Roman numeral three. A number of these planes were stationed at airbases in Thailand during the Vietnam war and used for air strikes over Indochina. But American and Thai officials said that the last American warplanes left Thailand last December.

China wheat deal

OTTAWA — China has signed an agreement in Peking to purchase $150 million worth of Canadian wheat, Transport Minister Otto Lang announced Friday. He said China bought 35.4 million bushels — 950,000 tons — under the fourth wheat contract signed by the Chinese since a three-year agreement was reached in October 1973. The contract brings total Chinese purchases in the period to 152 million bushels. It calls for shipment between April and December. Strong sales have reduced Canada's reserves of wheat from 290 million bushels last July 31 to a current 125 million bushels.

Bribery blacklist

CARACAS, Venezuela — President Carlos Andres Perez said Friday his government will blacklist all companies that have engaged in bribery. He did not say whether the list would include firms found to have paid bribes in countries other than Venezuela. An official investigation currently is under way in Venezuela of charges that Occidental Petroleum Corp. paid bribes to Venezuelan government officials to obtain service contracts in southern Lake Maracaibo. Occidental has denied the charges.

Irish violence

BELFAST — Violence erupted Friday night in Belfast, leaving one man dead and the city in turmoil, police said. Car bombs exploded. Cars, buses and trucks were hijacked and set afire. Barricades were thrown up in parts of the city. The violence was thought by security forces to be a protest against the decision to give no special treatment to persons arrested after March 1 for political crimes. Meanwhile, a car bomb exploded on a side street in the fashionable Chelsea district about a mile from the center of London on Friday night. The last London bombing was Feb. 21 when five persons were wounded by a blast in Selfridge's department store. There have been six bombings this year in a campaign police have blamed on the Irish Republican Army.

Grant retirement

I was employed by the W.T. Grant Co. from 1959 until 1975 when the stores here were closed. Three months ago, I filed out a form requesting that my contributions to the retirement plan be refunded, but I've heard nothing from the company. I should have almost $1,000 coming to me. Many of the employees who worked with me have written letters to the company asking about their pensions and no one has got any answers. Can Action Line look into this? E.N., Long Beach.

The Grant Co.'s pension funds are not involved in the firm's bankruptcy action, and you should receive your full benefits, but you may have to wait several months to get your money. In October, the company filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition, which allows a firm to continue operating but holds off its creditors to give it time to try to reorganize financially. The company, however, recently announced plans to close most of its remaining 359 stores in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states. A spokesman for the U.S. Pension Benefits Guaranty Corp., a federal agency, said the government is keeping tabs on the Grant Co.'s pension plan to make sure the funds are disbursed properly. "The fund is completely separate from the company's other assets and is in fairly good shape, but there is such a backlog of retirement-benefits applications that it will take some time for employees to start getting their payments," he added. Those persons already receiving monthly pension benefits should continue to get their checks regularly.

For a song

I have written several songs which the band I play with is now using. I plan to leave the group and would like to know how I can protect my rights to my material. L.A., Long Beach.

You can copyright your music, but, even if you do, the only way you could protect your rights if your fellow band members continue to use your songs without your permission is to file a civil lawsuit against them. You can obtain an application for a musical-composition copyright for each of your songs from the Register of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20559. After completing the application, you should mail it with the $6 registration fee per song and a copy of your music and lyrics, in sheet-music form, to the copyright office. If you have just the words of a song without any music, it can't be copyrighted as a musical composition. It could be registered as a poem, but only if it's been published. Unpublished musical compositions may be copyrighted. A copyright, which gives the author sole rights to record and publish the music, is valid for 28 years and may be renewed for an additional 28 years. If your music is later published, you must file another application with the copyright office to register your song as a published work. A copyright grants you the rights to royalties from other individuals' recordings or paid public performances of your compositions, but enforcement is up to you. The federal copyright office will not get involved in copyright-infringement cases.

World Vision

We have recently become interested in a charitable organization called World Vision International. They sponsor needy children in underdeveloped countries. Could you give me some information on this group? R.A.C., Long Beach.

World Vision, Inc., headquartered in Monrovia, describes itself as a nonprofit, Christian humanitarian organization, caring for 80,000 children in 36 countries. The organization promotes development of impoverished countries, provides emergency aid in times of disaster and does a considerable amount of evangelism work through its missions around the world. According to the 1974 financial report filed with the California Registry of Charitable Trusts in Sacramento, World Vision took in $12,465,000 that year. Some of their expenditures included $6.9 million in charitable grants, $5.1 million in salaries and administrative costs, $60,000 for fund-raising, $324,000 for advertising and $2.3 million for printing, professional fees, supplies, freight and postage. A World Vision spokesman told Action Line the group's overseas budget for 1976 is $20 million, $12 million of which is allocated to the child-care program.

Watson aide quits in conflict hassle

By NOEL SWANN

From Our L.A. Bureau

A top aide to County Assessor Philip Watson has resigned over charges his outside appraisal work was a conflict of interest. Watson confirmed Friday that Marvin Blatt, 49, director of the personal property division, resigned Wednesday from his $38,994 a year job.

The conflict, Watson said, stemmed from an appraisal Blatt made in 1974 for a plant being acquired in Tulare County by a subsidiary of Stauffer Chemical Co.

The assessor said he learned of the outside work after receiving a letter from the State Board of Equalization. Watson said the state board mentioned it had found no "scintilla of evidence" that Blatt had been involved in any improper assessments. But Watson said he views the outside work as a conflict.

Nursing home loses ward suit

From Our L.A. Bureau
Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Marvin Freeman ruled Friday that Public Guardian Bruce Altman was acting within his powers when he called for the removal of 17 county wards from the Lincoln Care Center in downtown Los Angeles.

Freeman made the statement at a court hearing in a suit brought by Clarence Firstenberg, owner of the facility, who claimed several of the patients had been removed against their will.

EARLIER this week Firstenberg had barred county employees from entering the nursing home to remove the patients, and Freeman subsequently issued warrants directing the sheriff to remove the wards.

He also indicated Friday that it was his "present thinking" that Lincoln Care Center had no standing in the proceedings before the court. He set a hearing for March 8 to decide on legal arguments about the center's standing in court.

Meanwhile, Health Services Director Liston Witherrill said the center was cited for 37 alleged violations during a recent inspection that led to the removal of the 17 wards. He said his staff has also referred to the district attorney an inspection report of the alleged unauthorized withdrawal of $19,000 from the center's patient trust account and the disbursement of $8,700 to patients who did not have money in the fund.

HE SAID the main violation for which the center was cited alleged that a patient was crippled as a result of failing to receive leg braces and splints ordered by a doctor.

Other violations, he said, included unsanitary conditions, mice infestation in bedside cabinets, patient-care equipment stored near contaminated bedpans, water pitchers containing dirty water and unclean syringes used for feeding patients.

Witherrill said one patient was found tied to a chair by her chest, wrists, waist and ankles with what appeared to be torn sheets. Other restraints were attached to her bed-frame.

He also said a bottle containing 34 poisonous tablets was found in an unlocked closet in a room occupied by 10 patients, some of whom suffered from a degree of mental incapacity.

A deal that began in '98 finally closed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A $100 refund to a Garden Grove woman has been approved by the State Lands Commission for an incomplete land buy that occurred in 1998.

On May 28, 1998, in Tulare County, James McCormick paid $100 for 80 acres of land, the commission was told, and received a certificate of purchase the next month.

However, he didn't complete the purchase by filing "proof of the mineral character of the land." The sale was canceled Aug. 13, 1918.

McCormick never applied for a refund, but Evarista McCormick Conner, his daughter, recently filed and the commission approved it Thursday.

Escape try delays girl's kidnap trial

The juvenile trial of a 15-year-old Southland girl accused of kidnapping 5-year-old Kerry Ann Toney was postponed Friday because the defendant, a frequent runaway, escaped from custody.

The girl, who used the alias of Maria Sanchez, fled from a county hospital Wednesday afternoon, authorities said, but was recaptured by Long Beach police Friday within an hour after they were told of her escape.

"We knew she'd come back to Long Beach," said juvenile officer Dorothy Pierce. "Every time she's run away, she's come back. She's a creature of habit."

Juvenile Sgt. Jim Jacobs explained that the girl, who was arrested Feb. 4 in Santa Barbara with the missing 5-year-old, had since been in custody of officials at Los Padrinos juvenile-detention center in Downey.

She complained of being ill, however, and was transferred to a hospital, from which she quickly escaped, Jacobs said.

Since 1972 the girl has lived in a series of Los Angeles-area foster homes, according to authorities, and has fled from them 27 times.

The Sanchez girl—whose real name is kept secret by law—was arrested three days after the Toney child was reported missing by her mother, 26-year-old Cheryl Jump, at 1147 St. Louis Ave.

During those three days, police conducted a fruitless house-to-house search of the neighborhood, then located an apartment where the child's clothing was found. Those clues eventually led to the discovery of the suspect and the Toney girl—who was suffering only from "the sniffles"—on a Santa Barbara street corner.

Authorities said the Sanchez girl's trial would be rescheduled next week.

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

BOSTON (AP)—Jimmy Carter, suddenly the Democrat to beat in the presidential primaries, said Friday the attacks of his Massachusetts campaign rivals may boomerang because voters are fed up with bickering, squabbling politicians.

"I don't believe that the nation appreciates personal animosities and attacks among candidates that hope to be president," the former Georgia governor said as he staged a one-day windup quest for votes in the presidential primary election next Tuesday.

Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington and, in a lower key, Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, have been bearing down on Carter since his 30 per cent showing made him the year's first winner in the New Hampshire presidential primary.

"I'm not afraid of criticism of me..." Carter told about 800 persons at a rally in Faneuil Hall. "I won't hurt me, but I'm afraid it might hurt the country...So I hope it is a passing phase."

Carter stuck to his cautious forecast of a top-of-the-finish in Massachusetts, where eight Democrats are campaigning and where, for the first time, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is on the ballot and running hard.

Jackson had denounced as "incredible and ridiculous" a Carter statement that he would, as part of a broader tax package, seek repeal of the income tax deduction homeowners are permitted for their mortgage interest payments.

"Sen. Jackson's statement was a gross distortion..." Carter countered. The former Georgia governor said he wouldn't do anything to increase the tax burden on homeowners but would as president consider the elimination of all special exemptions except possibly that for charitable contributions.

"I intend to eliminate as many as I can as a comprehensive, overall tax reform package..." Carter said. He said that would mean a decrease, not an increase, in the federal taxes paid by the average American. But he also said his detailed proposal is not yet completed. He said he would come out with a full plan later this year.

Udall said there would be a taxpayer rebellion if the interest deduction were repealed, something Congress surely would block anyhow.

The Arizona congressman, who ran second in New Hampshire with 24 per cent, denied in an interview with the Lowell Sun that he was part of any concerted stop-Carter movement.

Bayh said the same thing. "I don't believe in cabals," he said.

Carter said the criticism was testament to his emergence atop the Democratic field. He said he is not going to retaliate with any attack on the "character or ability of my opponents... They're all good men," he said. He sounded the same theme at Salem State College.

"I don't intend to get involved in personal, back-and-forth squabbling with other candidates," he said.

Campaign note

While the Democrats made their campaign rounds, there was a short-lived strike threat by municipal employees upset over threatened layoffs that could have disrupted the Boston balloting. But a union lawyer said the dispute was settled Friday night.

Other political developments Friday included:

—Ford was endorsed by 11 former Republican national chairmen. The declaration of support came after eight of the chairmen had breakfast with Ford at the White House.

"We're all for Mr. Ford in 1976," said William Miller, the party's 1964 vice presidential nominee. He said there are 12 "living and breathing" GOP national committee chairmen and "11 are united in their support of President Ford for the nomination of our party and for the election in November."

—Ford prepared to fly to Miami today and spend the weekend campaigning in Florida.

—Republican presidential contender Ronald Reagan said he doubts very much if Ford would consider the vice presidential slot on the GOP ticket.

"It's impossible for me to believe he would go from President to vice president," Reagan told about 700 people at a retirement community near Tampa, Fla.

During an interview Thursday, Ford said it was possible that Reagan, among other Republicans, might be chosen as his running mate if Ford wins the nomination.

Friday, Reagan ruled out a chance of taking a vice presidential spot on a ticket headed by Ford. "I'm not interested," he said.

—Carter is expected to maintain a slight edge when Oklahoma Democrats hold county caucuses today to elect delegates to the congressional district conventions.

More than 7,000 Oklahoma Democrats will gather at 78 county conventions to determine whether Carter can maintain the slight advantage he earned over former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris at the precinct conventions on Feb. 7.

—Party officials in South Carolina say the Democratic precinct caucuses today could result in a three-way tie for delegates between Alabama Gov. George Wallace, Carter and those uncommitted.

Most estimates are that about 40 per cent of the delegates chosen in the precincts for the 46 county conventions on March 8 will be uncommitted, with a close split between Carter and Wallace for the other 60 per cent.

—Wallace, considered the frontrunner in Florida, attended a Fort Lauderdale rally.

—Democratic contender Milton Shapp met with Florida millionaire John D. McArthur in Palm Beach Shores.

"We talked about fundamentals of business, and applying them to government," said McArthur, praising the Pennsylvania governor for his business experience.

Congress gets time to rebuild election panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Friday gave Congress an additional 20 days to rebuild the Federal Election Commission in a decision that at least temporarily keeps the federal campaign-funds splintered turned on for presidential candidates.

Many of the commission's powers, including the authority to certify government campaign funds and interpret the new election law, were due to expire Sunday night under terms of a Supreme Court decision issued Jan. 30.

The court gave Congress 30 days in which to reconstitute the commission, but legislation has been subjected to a barrage of proposals to change various features of the campaign law.

would veto any bill that would create confusion and bring on new litigation.

He said if the law isn't changed, "the watchdog will have lost its teeth. We must not retreat from our commitment to clean elections."

The problem the Supreme Court found with the commission was that its six members were not appointed in a manner constitutionally compatible with their duties. Four were appointed by Congress and two others by the President with consent of both the House and Senate required.

Because some of their duties were administrative, the court said this form of appointment violated the separation of powers concept of the constitution.

argued, did not participate in the decision.

An FEC spokesman said commissioners were pleased to be able to continue operating and to keep the matching funds moving.

John Gardner, head of Common Cause, expressed pleasure at the delay despite it being shorter than requested. Sen. James Buckley, Cons.-R.-N.Y., one of the plaintiffs in the original suit against the election law, did not object to the new delay.

IN ITS Jan. 30 ruling, the court held that government subsidies for presidential campaigns and limits on campaign contributions are constitutional. It struck down most limits on campaign spending except for candidates accepting federal matching funds.

Even if Congress does nothing to amend the law, however, the commission would continue in existence to perform duties okayed by the court, including various record-keeping, audit and information functions.

PLANS TO reconstitute the commission would make all six members presidential appointees.

But other proposals would add federal financing of congressional elections to the law and narrow the commission's authority to interpret the election statute.

The court voted 7 to 1 to grant the extra 20 days with only Justice Harry Blackmun in opposition. Justice John Paul Stevens, not a member of the court when the case was first

Nixon silent on trip critics

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

KWEILIN, China — Former President Nixon "definitely will not respond to the criticism" of his China trip that has come from the United States, an aide said Friday.

The aide, John Brennan, would not elaborate on Nixon's stand regarding domestic criticism and declined to discuss specific critical statements, which have come from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and President Ford, among others.

On Thursday Ford told a Washington interviewer who asked about the effect of the Nixon trip on the New Hampshire primary, where the President took 51 per cent of the vote over GOP challenger Ronald Reagan.

"I think the weight of

On Friday Nixon cruised 50 miles down the Li River past spectacular mountains that he repeatedly compared to pyramids. In the evening he attended a recital of songs, dances and acrobatics in Kweilin.

Today the Nixons fly to Canton, where they will visit a commune and the hot springs. They depart Sunday for home.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who recently said Nixon would report to the White House on his China trip after his return, told reporters in Washington: "Former President Nixon will definitely be debriefed when

Kissinger also said he did not expect to see Nixon in California.

One of the things Nixon is expected to tell U.S. officials in his debriefing is his impression of the current split in the Peking hierarchy between leftist radicals and the moderates they are attacking.

IN PEKING a poster campaign describing Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping as China's "foremost capitalist roadster" began Thursday.

Teng, groomed for the premiership by the late Premier Chou En-lai in the last two years of his life, had been the No. 1 target in the leftists' campaign against "capitalist roadsters" but had not previously been publicly named.

The campaign organizers stressed that names were not to be used until the accusers were fully confident of their facts.

The campaign against "capitalist roadsters" pits radical leftists rigidly committed to ideology against moderates favoring alternative approaches to China's problems. China's acting premier, Hua Kuo-feng, is associated with the radicals.

THE POSTERS, which appeared in two courtyards in the Foreign Language Institute at Peking University, repeated accusations that Teng "took the capitalist road" and was a rightist attempting to destroy the fruits of the cultural revolution.

Teng also was accused of helping rehabilitate hundreds of officials from the army, government and Communist Party who had been disgraced, like himself, during the 1966-69 cultural revolution.

The Hungarian news agency MTI reported from Peking that the posters also call Teng a "fox" and a "traitor."

Many of the posters reportedly say the anti-Teng campaign is now being organized in the name of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Kelley denies reports on end to counterspy efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley Friday denied a report that the FBI has halted most efforts to track down Soviet spies in the United States. But he acknowledged there have been "changes in investigative procedures."

The director was responding to reports that Kelley's predecessor, the late J. Edgar Hoover, phased out several methods used to identify and track down undercover agents for Soviet and other hostile foreign intelligence services.

"Counterintelligence and espionage investigations continue as one of the FBI's highest priorities," Kelley said.

"Although changes in investigator procedures have occurred over the years, they in no way represent a deemphasis in this most important and essential area," he said. "The FBI is well aware of the fact that the United States remains a primary target of certain hostile intelligence services, and we must be unrelenting in our efforts to pursue vigorously and aggressively investigations of this nature," he added.

The reports said that the methods phased out included checking immigration records for traces of Cyrillic handwriting, opening mail to and from Soviet and East European embassies and missions in the U.S. and attempting to locate secret transmitters used by agents to beam messages overseas.

The Times said Hoover ended the mail-opening program in 1966 because he was reluctant to assign large numbers of agents to that task at the expense of investigating domestic radicals.

The search for clandestine transmitters ended in 1971, the reports said. The program to scan immigration records for traces of the Cyrillic handwriting of the Russian language also ended in the late 1960s or early 1970s, according to the reports.

Hayden and Tunney woo liberal Dems

By DOUG WILLIS
AP Political Writer

U.S. Sen. John Tunney and his liberal challenger, Tom Hayden, courted the liberal wing of the Democratic Party Friday with parallel attacks on big business and the Ford administration.

The contest for the endorsement of the liberal California Democratic Council is the first direct confrontation this year between Tunney and Hayden.

Tunney, despite his incumbency, staked out the underdog's role in remarks in a midnight speech, openly conceding that he has had a rough time in past years with CDC, the most liberal statewide Democratic group in California.

HAYDEN emphasized his liberal platform and took what appeared to be a swipe at Democratic Gov. Brown in his remarks.

"I do not believe that senior citizens or poor people should be lowering their expectations," Hayden said, borrowing Brown's often-repeated "lower your expectations" slogan.

Tunney was trying to avert an endorsement for his antiwar activist opponent by stressing that he was liberal on many issues, although perhaps not as liberal as CDC would like.

"I do not pretend that all of you — or even most of you — agree with every one of my positions," Tunney said. "I was later than some in opposing the war in Vietnam," Tunney said. "But when Dr. (Henry) Kissinger and Mr. Ford tried their hand at a new entanglement (in Angola), I led the fight to stop that covert assistance once and for all."

TUNNEY said he opposes the "concentration of corporate power" with tougher antitrust laws, but he did not go as far as Hayden, who called for congressional hearings "to restructure and charter our big corporations so that they are responsible and accountable to the workers they employ and the consumers they serve."

Hayden also called for public ownership of natural resources and a foreign policy that will "really end the cold war (through) recognition and trade with those countries such as Vietnam, Cambodia and Cuba which we have bombed and embargoed for so long."

Tunney did not directly request the CDC endorsement in his prepared remarks, but said he hoped for their help in November to "keep this seat for a progressive Democratic voice."

THE endorsement

Voorhis named to panel on aging

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Jerry Voorhis, a former congressman who was the first victim of Richard Nixon's hard-slugging campaigns, was named by Gov. Brown Friday to the California Commission on Aging.

The 74-year-old Voorhis was the incumbent Democratic congressman representing the suburbs south and east of Los Angeles in 1946 when Nixon — freshly out of Navy — returned home to Whittier.

Nixon, who opened a law office and decided to run for Congress, told voters in a campaign brochure that a vote for Nixon would be a vote against "Communist-dominated" influences.

The "Communist-dominated" influence was the CIO Political Action Committee, which endorsed Voorhis and many other Democrats that year.

VOORHIS, who was

would be a significant victory for either contender in the June 8 Democratic primary.

But the Tunney-Hayden battle is only one of three major political events at the three-day CDC endorsing convention.

There is also a contest for the CDC endorsement for President. And Brown is scheduled to appear before CDC today.

Six years ago, in his first race for the U.S. Senate, Tunney was booed at the CDC convention. His primary opponent, Rep. George Brown, won the CDC endorsement by a 95 per cent margin.

This year Tunney is backed by Rep. Brown and U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, a cofounder of CDC. They jointly endorsed Tunney as "an articulate, knowledgeable and effective liberal Democrat."

THAT means Tunney will be in a stronger position with CDC. His campaign aides say they hope to block a Hayden endorsement, or win it for Tunney.

Hayden, the antiwar activist and former Chicago 7 defendant, has been making headway in what he describes as his "long-shot" campaign against Tunney.

A CDC endorsement would be a big boost for him. But if Hayden fails to win CDC support, it would raise questions about Hayden's claim to be a serious more liberal alternative to Tunney.

Because endorsements require a 60 per cent majority, chances are reduced that any presidential contender will capture a formal endorsement.

THAT fact has diminished the importance this year of the contest among presidential contenders. But even without a majority, the CDC vote Sunday is expected to give some measure of the relative strength of the presidential contenders among liberal California Democrats.

Brown's mixed liberalism on social issues and conservatism on spending issues has won approval of 87 per cent of Californians surveyed in a recent California Poll.

But liberal activists have been increasingly hostile to Brown's spending restraints, which they say have hit especially hard on social programs.

Brown has gone before other seemingly hostile groups in recent months, such as state employees facing layoffs, and received favorable receptions.

BUT the 20,000-member CDC, generally regarded as the most liberal major Democratic group in California, has been tough in the past on other politicians with liberal reputations who took compromise stands.

Lawyers' ads ban legality to be studied

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge Friday ordered that a three-judge court be convened to determine the constitutionality of a California state Bar rule banning advertising by lawyers.

U.S. District Court Judge Samuel Conti refused a state Bar motion to dismiss the suit brought against it by Consumers Union and instead ordered that the California Supreme Court be added as a defendant.

Stuart Forsyth, attorney for the Bar, contended his group only made recommendations on disciplining lawyers and that the state tribunal actually imposed the sanctions on those it finds warrants such punishment.

No date was set for the three-judge hearing.

The suit by Consumers Union and three San Francisco-area law firms serving low-income clients seeks to end all restrictions on advertising.

Union wants to arm parole officers

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State parole officers should be provided safety equipment, including pistols, because of "this age of increasing violence," the California State Employees Association said Friday.

The CSEA legal division is seeking a court order to force the state Department of Corrections to provide its 900 parole officers with revolvers, Mace and two-way radios.

A lawsuit was filed last week in Shasta County Superior Court on behalf of Charles Swim, a parole officer who lives in Redding, and all other Department of Corrections parole officers. The suit is scheduled to be heard March 8.

"We think being a parole officer is a dangerous job, and that the officers should be allowed all the means to protect themselves and parolees," said Ken Perca, CSEA attorney.

Joining in the suit with the CSEA was the Parole Agents Association of California.

Helen Atkinson, assistant information director for the Department of Corrections, said the department will oppose the suit.

"Our policy is they do not carry guns. Over the years we have never had a parole agent stabbed or shot."

"Since everyone knows they are not armed, they are not subject to such attacks," she said, comparing parole officers with the unarmed English police.

She said that only two states provide weapons for parole officers, and California's policy had been to provide a weapon "if the officer is being threatened. Then the officer can seek permission."

The CSEA said this special circumstance is not enough.

"The absurdity of this,

coupled with the lack of communications devices, becomes more evident every day in this age of increasing violence," said Bob Bark, head of the CSEA law enforcement, regulatory and public safety program.

Rich Martin, CSEA spokesman, said, "Our position is not based on an overwhelming number of body injuries. Our position is based on the increasing release of felons under the Department of Corrections' new program. They're just pouring'em out on the streets."

"We see it as a preventive measure. We shouldn't wait until we have 1,700 incidents to document our case," Martin said.

Shackles in court restricted

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Supreme Court ruled Friday that defendants cannot be shackled during a trial in the jury's presence unless a need for the restraint is shown in the court record.

The ruling reaffirmed an 1871 decision and overturned the conviction of Bernardo Duran, convicted of a 1973 prison assault at the California Men's Colony at San Luis Obispo.

The 5-2 decision said that "physical restraint of defendants (cannot be justified) simply because they are prisoners already incarcerated on other charges or convictions."

"An accused may be restrained, for instance," said the court, "on a showing that he plans an escape from the courtroom or that he plans to disrupt proceedings by nonviolent means."

It said determinations of whether to use physical restraints must be made case-by-case.

THE RULING stemmed from Duran's trial on charges of stabbing a fellow prisoner. Duran requested that he and other witnesses be allowed to appear before the jury without wrist or ankle restraints, but the court denied the request.

Duran asserted in his appeal that the court had made a prejudicial error in denying his shackling motion and his request for cross-examination intended to show bias of a witness.

The high court agreed that the errors were prejudicial and said they provided grounds for reversing his conviction.

In a dissent, Justice William Clark said the threat to courtroom security "inherent in the defendant's propensity to violence was amply demonstrated."

CAB approves air fare boosts of 1, 2 per cent

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Friday agreed to let nine airlines raise their fares in the 48 contiguous states by 2 per cent over the next two weeks and said one carrier may hike fares by 1 per cent.

At the same time, the board agreed to let three airlines raise rates between mainland U.S. points and the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

The carriers that requested the 2-per cent domestic fare increase apparently will be allowed to put it into effect on selected routes instead of having to increase fares on all routes they serve. The CAB agreed earlier this week to allow the airlines to follow such a policy for a 1 per cent fare hike that went into effect Feb. 1, and United Air Lines said it intended to apply the 2 per cent fare increase to selected markets.

This procedure would allow the carriers to keep current fares on routes where they must compete against airlines that did not raise fares while raising rates on other routes where all carriers agreed to increase fares.

IT ALSO means that airline passengers may, in certain cases, find it cheaper to take other carriers or other routes to their destination.

The 2 per cent hike is effective Monday for American Airlines, Eastern Airlines, Trans World Airlines, United and Hughes Airwest. It will be effective Friday for Western Airlines, March 10 for Braniff International, March 11 for Southern and March 14 for Frontier and Texas International.

per cent except for Southern, which requested a 1 per cent hike.

Several major carriers, including Delta, National, Continental and Northwest, did not request the 2-per cent increase. It was not immediately known if any of those carriers would file for the increase now that it has been approved for the other airlines or if they would keep their current rates.

The increase was the second approved by the CAB on domestic routes this year. It earlier agreed to let most airlines raise their rates by 1 per cent on Feb. 1.

The 2 per cent hike would mean that the cost of a first-class round-trip ticket from New York to Houston would jump from the $322 charged at the end of 1975 to about $332 if it and the previous 1 per cent hike both were put into effect on that route.

A COACH ticket on the same route would jump from the $230 fare of two months ago to about $238.

The board's order on fares to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands affected three carriers—American, Eastern and Pan American World Airways.

The board agreed to let American and Eastern raise their fares between New York and San Juan, Puerto Rico, by 3 per cent and to hike fares on other mainland U.S. routes to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands by one-half of 1 per cent.

The board also allowed Pan Am to increase its fares on routes between the mainland and Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands by one-half of 1 per cent.

Firms said getting better loan deals than consumers

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House Banking subcommittee study shows that most banks have reduced the cost of loans to big corporate borrowers but not to individual consumers.

The subcommittee on domestic monetary policy study included comparative figures on interest rates charged by banks in 10 metropolitan areas and in California. It was based on raw data collected by the Federal Reserve Board in its latest survey of banks for interest rates.

That information had been kept secret by the Federal Reserve until Consumers Union filed suit under the Freedom of Information Act to force disclosure. Consumers Union maintained that the Federal Reserve should help consumers make choices about which banks would give them the best return for their money.

The Federal Reserve fought the suit, although it acknowledged that the data was public information available to any individual who took the time to check each bank for interest rates.

In a statement released with the House subcommittee study, Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., said that although marketplace interest rates have declined dramatically from all-time highs of two or three years ago during the height of inflation, consumers have benefited little.

"While the prime customers—the big corporate borrowers—have been getting better breaks at the loan windows, this survey clearly shows that the people who are borrowing to buy automobiles and consumer goods continue to pay excessively high interest rates at commercial banks," Patman said.

He said consumers pay top dollars on loans but are not paid the maximum permitted for interest on bank savings accounts.

"Thus the consumer is often hit at both ends of the transaction—high interest on loans and low interest on savings," Patman said.

The study showed that from November 1974 to November 1975 the average interest rate for consumer goods went from 13.16 per cent to 12.96 per cent; for autos from 11.57 per cent to 11.24 per cent and for personal loans from 13.47 per cent to 13.40 per cent.

However, during the same period the average prime rate, which is charged to a bank's most credit-worthy corporate customers for short-term loans, dropped from 10.5 per cent to 7.5 per cent. And the Federal Reserve discount rate, the amount banks pay to borrow money, dropped from 7.5 per cent to 6 per cent.

The subcommittee's study was based on Federal Reserve data collected on banks in the Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas-Ft. Worth, Detroit, Miami, New York, Newark, Philadelphia and Washington metropolitan areas and from California, where most major banks have offices throughout the state.

An aide to Patman said when the study and Patman's statement were released that the subcommittee would publish more of the data at regular intervals.

Auto chief resignation 'voluntary'

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—James B. Gregory, who resigned suddenly this week as the government's top auto safety regulator, insisted Friday that he quit voluntarily.

"I was not asked to resign," Gregory, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), told a House subcommittee. "I was not fired. There are no hidden meanings in my decision."

BUT Gregory acknowledged that his departure was motivated by the "frustration" of trying to regulate safety in the face of hostility from automakers and truckers, and indifference by much of the public.

Although 20,000 lives a year are being saved because of government auto safety regulations, he said, most citizens think safety is "about as exciting as a bad haircut."

"Any regulatory job is a minefield," Gregory said. "There is pressure all the time...I just got up one morning and said, 'It's a good time to lay this career to rest.'"

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Harsh corners of house walls need to be softened with shrubbery, and it can be done one of two ways.

Gardener can plant a husky growing shrub close to corner to break the bareness. Or a more artistic way is to create an espallier form with pyracantha branches carefully trained to grow upward on one side of the wall, and the remaining branches trained to grow on the other wall.

The branches must be tied to special supports on the house walls.

The best time to prune pyracantha is during the blooming season.

PYRACANTHAS are problem plants for many gardeners. They usually are purchased when they have berries on them. Gardeners often wonder why the plants don't berry the next year. This is primarily due to the fast root growth when the plant discovers all that room in a garden.

The plants will begin to bear berries once they get a good root system established, and thereafter produce berries annually in season.

There's quite a range of shrubs whose branches can be trained to supports to cover bare walls. There are two varieties of the evergreen tropical shrub, Calliandra, that can be used for an espallier effect.

The huskiest and most vigorous grower, callian-dra inequilatera, has striking looking stamens of rich pink that form fluffy powder-puff blossoms.

The daintier medium-size variety, calliandra guilfordii, has fine lacy leafage and smaller blossoms which are a rich scarlet.

SOME varieties of sasanqua camellias, with their willowy growth branches, too, can be espalliered to cover walls. This group of camellias will grow in sun or shade, whereas the japonica type needs more shade than sun.

We've had a number of requests from organic gardeners as to where they can purchase nature's controls instead of using chemical sprays. We have a helpful answer for those folks.

Gardeners can purchase ladybugs from Burpee Seed Company in Riverside. A half pint of them is enough for a small garden, a quart for a half acre.

The ladybugs greedily search the plants for the larvae of plant-destroying insects, including fruit scales, aphids, fleas, thrips, leaf hoppers and tree lice.

Praying mantis eggs are sold in cases. The young have a voracious appetite for aphids, flies, beetles, caterpillars, grasshoppers, and other plant-damaging pests. Females lay brown egg cases on low growing twigs in the fall, and they usually survive moderate winters. The cases hatch 100 to 200 praying mantis.

JUST LIKE egg hatches, the dreaded spurge weeds sprout instead of hatch from weed seeds scattered the previous fall and grow unmolested. Gardeners would be wise to use a recommended pre-emerge herbicide and spray a dichondra lawn now.

Such a herbicide will also sterilize the seeds of blade-type weeds as well as a host of small broad-leaf weed seeds. See listing on the herbicide label.

Spurge and several types of small and large broad-leaf weeds can be controlled in a blade lawn, providing the weeds are growing or have started to grow. Check with your nurseryman for a post-emerge herbicide spray.

Jobs for gardeners

Vegetables are available in pony packs, or in the individual plastic containers ready to set out. Consider the soil of these plants as having been lovingly prepared by the wholesale grower. Likewise the plants will continue to grow better if they are set out in a prepared soil somewhat comparable to the soil they grew up in.

Fuchsias in protected areas may be pruned back. Study the size and shape of the plants. Cut them back approximately one third their size. Scrape off any remaining top dressing, scatter bone meal or flower-fruit fertilizer over the well watered soil, lightly chop into the soil, then spread a quarter inch of organic top dressing over the soil and water down.

Feed the plants lightly with a high nitrogen fertilizer several times, then switch to a lower nitrogen one, but containing more phosphoric acid.

Scatter snail-slug bait periodically in the garden and particularly in the ground cover areas where they mostly breed.

CB radio also headache for FCC

New fad sweeping America

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press

Millions of Americans looking for highway conversation and motoring advice have turned to Citizens Band radios, boosting industry sales and causing headaches for government officials trying to keep up with the boom.

The Federal Communications Commission, which licenses CB operators, was receiving about 15,000 applications a month at the start of 1974. By December 1975, the number of applications had jumped to 415,000 a month and the FCC expects to handle 3.6 million license requests during 1976.

The electronic industry says sales of CB equipment are expected to reach $1 billion this year, up from $400 million in 1974.

ONE reason for the boom was the publicity given to independent truckers protesting the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit. The truckers illegally used their CB radios to warn each other of state troopers and the fancifully named drivers with a language of their own became pop figures in songs, books and even a television series.

The 23-channel CB network established in 1958 as an inexpensive form of two-way radio communication for short, personal messages became a major cult. Some operators simply wanted to join the colorful world of the truckers; others wanted the information on weather conditions and police operations that the drivers traded.

The number of licenses doesn't even begin to reflect all the CB sets in operation. One license can cover several sets. A corporation, for example, may get one license for all the sets used by its employees. In addition, Charles Higinbotham of the FCC's Safety and Special Radio Services Division says that for every three or four licensed operators, there is one unlicensed operator.

The commission estimates that overall, there are about 11 million CB sets in operation across the country.

THE FCC lowered its license fee from $20 to $4 last March in an effort to encourage people to register. But the commission says some operators simply don't want to be bothered waiting since it can take up to 10 weeks to process an application.

Other unlicensed CB users operate their radios for illegal purposes—communicating information about burglaries, narcotics deals and transportation of stolen goods.

Breaking the rules—with or without a license—can mean penalties. A licensed violator of FCC regulations can be fined up to $200 and lose his license; an unlicensed operator faces a penalty of up to $10,000 and a year in jail.

The FCC's Field Operations Bureau, which has 30 staff offices across the country, got 45,000 complaints about CB radios last year. Most of them concerned interference to television sets and other home entertainment items and most stemmed from defects in the receiving equipment, including lack of a filter to screen out unwanted signals.

JOINING the CB network is relatively easy. Anyone over 18 can get a license. No technical knowledge is required.

Buying the radio is a little harder. A transmitter-receiver, microphone and antenna can cost anywhere from $60 to $400. The Office of Consumer Affairs of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says sets ranging from $140 to $180 are generally the most economical for beginners.

The price of a CB set depends on the number of channels and the range available. The FCC's maximum limit for CB transmissions is 150 miles. The fewer the channels and the shorter the range, the cheaper. The most heavily monitored frequencies are Channels 9, 11 and 19. Channel 9 has been set aside by the FCC for highway safety reports; 11 is for establishing communication; and 19 is the major channel used by truckers to exchange information.

THE most popular CB radios, accounting for about 70 per cent of sales, are the mobile sets for use in cars, boats, etc. Other varieties include base station models for a permanent set-up and portable walkie-talkies.

The Office of Consumer Affairs advises would-be buyers to check the warranty of any set they are considering to find out what parts are guaranteed and for how long. Shoppers also should make sure the unit has been approved by the FCC. There should be a sticker on the radio itself.

The office suggests equipping a CB radio with a detachable antenna. The sets are targets for theft and an antenna is a clue to a thief that a car has a CB radio.

THE FCC is trying to determine whether there is a need for new policies on CB radios. The use of nicknames known as "handles" instead of assigned call letters makes it difficult to track operators using radios for illegal purposes.

A very old custom — and so far as we know it never fails. Of course older folks ate more potatoes than we do today, so the fumes of peeling were frequent and liberal.

Flu epidemic in 4 regions not expected nationwide

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Influenza has reached epidemic proportions in four regions of the country, but federal officials said Friday they do not expect a nationwide epidemic this year because the usual seasonal peak has passed.

In New York City the number of deaths from pneumonia, which are used as a crude indicator of influenza activity because influenza often leads to pneumonia, reached 243 last week. This was the highest total in any comparable period since 1940.

Dr. John S. Marr, the City Health Department's chief epidemiologist, said most of these deaths probably resulted from illnesses that started out with influenza. But he said that the high number of pneumonia deaths may also have resulted from co-existent outbreaks of other infectious organisms that can also cause pneumonia.

Other indicators such as school absenteeism and visits to hospital emergency rooms suggested that the peak of this year's influenza outbreak has passed.

The four regions affected are: New England, Middle Atlantic, Pacific and Mountain. Eastern states are bearing the brunt of the outbreak that pushed the U.S. Public Health Service's yardstick for influenza activity above the epidemic threshold for the second consecutive week.

The influenza virus causes people to cough, sneeze, run fevers and suffer muscle aches and pains. Some people, particularly young children, experience gastro-intestinal symptoms due to the influenza virus.

The Public Health Service's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta relies on reported deaths related to influenza and pneumonia from 121 major hospitals as the statistical indicator of influenza.

Though the pattern is unpredictable, a spokesman in Atlanta said: "It would be rather unique on the basis of past influenza experience if we had a major flu year that started this late."

The A-Victoria strain of virus was responsible for nearly all confirmed influenza outbreaks this year, federal epidemiologists said.

Last week, these medical detectives warned about the possibility of the return of the 1918 pandemic of influenza because virologists had isolated an unusual A-swine-like influenza virus from three military recruits and a soldier at Ft. Dix, N.J.

Seven newly detected cases due to the A-swine-like virus were reported Friday.

Never-ending battle

FDA experts detect filth in food

By CARL STEPP
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—John Dietrick has spent a fair part of his life searching for filth in your food.

He and 1,000 other Food and Drug Administration inspectors around the country routinely patrol canneries, bakeries, warehouses and grocery stores.

They rummage through garbage, scan walls for rat holes, trace insect trails and dip thermometers into food vats.

What they find is sometimes unsettling.

Already this year, the government has recalled or seized such everyday products as popcorn containing live insects, sugar contaminated with rat urine, pizza crust containing metal fragments and moldy tomato sauce.

IT HAS acted against soapy-tasting chocolate pudding, misbranded molasses, and rodent-gnawed self-rising flour.

Dietrick, 31, will tell you that most companies try hard to produce safe, sanitary food. He says his own eating habits haven't changed in his 10 years of troubleshooting for FDA.

But he'll also tell you some unappetizing tales.

Like the one about the woman who recently found part of a human finger in her spinach. Or the consumer whose rectal suppository contained a bullet. Or the can of cat food mislabeled as tuna fish for people.

Considering the billions of food items that Americans eat every day, the food industry's record is very good, FDA says.

BUT, ADDS FDA Assistant Commissioner John Walden, "As long as this world grows food in an open field where rats sit and flies fly, you won't have food entirely free from these problems."

So the FDA maintains 106 inspection offices and 17 laboratories around the country, checking on food, drugs and cosmetics.

In 1974, according to the latest FDA annual report, there were 225 food recalls and 272 seizures.

(A recall is a "voluntary" action by industry, often at FDA prodding. A seizure is a legal step by FDA, generally taken where industry can't or won't cooperate.)

Of the recalls, about 30 were in "class one," which includes emergencies involving threats to life. Most of those were part of a highly publicized nationwide effort to recall canned mushrooms suspected of carrying botulism.

Another memorable recall occurred in 1971, when canned products made by the Bon Vivant Soups Inc. of Newark, N.J. were recalled after a New York man died of botulism traced to vichyssoise soup.

RECALLS can be triggered in several ways.

Consumer complaints often lead to action. In the winter of 1974, shipments of Heinz baby cereals were voluntarily halted after Mr. and Mrs. William A. Williams of Charlotte, N.C., found metal shavings in a package of instant rice cereal.

Later, metal shivers were found in a second package, which officials traced to a Pittsburgh factory where drilling had been going on.

Recalls also are initiated by inspectors, who regularly sample products in stores and plants, and by companies, which often catch their own mistakes.

By and large, says FDA's Walden, companies are cooperative, even though the FDA can't force them into recalls.

"THEY understand fully well that if they don't volunteer, we can go out and seize their products and padlock their warehouses and prosecute them for interstate shipment of adulterated products," he explained.

Dietrick, who works out of the FDA's small field office in Falls Church, Va., said companies also cooperate with government inspectors, who usually drop in unannounced about once every two years.

Almost like detectives, they check the plant, equipment, personnel and operating procedures for signs of contamination.

Dietrick said a good inspector can quickly spot such telltale problems as rodent holes in walls, insect droppings, food stored in the open, piled-up garbage and other signs of uncleanness.

With products like flour, sieves are used to sift for insects. Special sampling devices let inspectors remove the core from a block of cheese or a box-car of grain.

Black lights are shone over bags because urine stains and some insects will glow under the fluorescence.

All these policing procedures have led to increased recalls, Walden says, but he doesn't think food is any less safe.

"Our best guess is that there isn't more dangerous food or more mistakes being made. We think the trend represents better regulation by the FDA and more quality control by industry itself."

Dozing off at odd moments attributed to overweight

By JOEL GREENBERG
Knight News Service

MIAMI—A Miami Beach man fell asleep in his bathroom with his hand propped against the sink. The hand slipped and broke a glass, which cut the man's wrist.

He was rushed to the hospital, where he dozed off—not passed out—while the doctor administered to his wounds.

A Las Vegas baccarat dealer sat poised for the climax of a tense, high-stakes game. The gentleman who bet $1,000 waited patiently for his cards.

HE NEVER got them. The dealer had fallen asleep and was fired on the spot.

The two men have more than just an embarrassing moment in common.

They are among a group of overweight Americans plagued by a recently discovered medical phenomenon called Periodic Sleep Apnea (PSA).

Thousands of obese people in this country actually stop breathing in their sleep for periods as long as a 1½ minutes, experts on breathing and sleep say. While the condition usually causes no immediate, severe effects, it does prevent deep sleep.

Consequently PSA sufferers sleep in the daytime and evening. They doze off while working, conversing, partying, showering and—most dangerously—while driving.

SOME manage to fend off the sleep, but then become irritable, depressed, hostile and even paranoid, according to researchers.

PSA's cure, say the doctors, is simple: lose weight.

"We've found that weight reduction causes the symptoms to disappear," says Dr. Marvin A. Sackner, a pulmonary specialist and chief of medicine at Mount Sinai Hospital in Miami Beach.

The Mount Sinai group was the first to identify PSA in the U.S., says Sackner.

The condition, also found in thick-necked people, is caused by blockage of the breathing passage during sleep. "When a person lies back, his neck muscles and tongue relax and drop back against the airway."

"PERSONS with large jaw tissue and tongues can actually cut off the airway and stop breathing," he said.

A typical PSA victim will alternate during sleep between short periods of snoring and not breathing at all. The snoring, caused by the vibrating tongue and throat tissue, will last for about two minutes, followed by 30 to 90 seconds of nonbreathing, Sackner explains.

"In the quiet period, the abdominal muscles contract in an effort to open up the clogged airway," he says. When that is finally accomplished, the person usually lets out a loud snort and begins snoring again shortly thereafter.

"THE PERSON almost never lapses into deep sleep," Sackner says. "So he is chronically sleepy during the day."

In several severe cases, the physicians have inserted breathing tubes into the patients' neck. The procedure restores normal breathing and enables deep sleep.

But with most persons, weight loss is the preferable cure. "We're not reducing specialists, but in the several patients we have gotten to lose weight, the symptoms have vanished," Sackner says.

Sackner and his colleague, Dr. Edward D. Michaelson, are trying to get more precise measurements of exactly what happens during PSA sleep. They are starting to equip outpatients with portable machines that measure brain waves, heart beats, breathing and abdominal activities, and record it all on a tape cassette.

MOUNT Sinai's patients have ranged in age from 19 to 71. But Sackner says there is some evidence that the same problem can occur in children with large tonsils and adenoids. "It's possible that this could be a cause of crib death," the mysterious, sudden infant killer, he suggested. PSA might also contribute to the cardiac death of overweight an person in his sleep, he added.

"Not all people with chronic fatigue or weight problems have this condition," Sackner says. "It can be present in varying degrees—from mild to severe."

"But we think it's very common," he says.

Study finds no TV-violence link

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Television violence may cause more violent dreams in a child, but it won't make him punch his teacher, according to a network official's description of a forthcoming study report.

Alfred R. Schneider, an American Broadcasting Co. vice president, said Friday the report, commissioned by his network, will show that television violence cannot be directly linked with violent acts in real life.

Schneider, who heads ABC's broadcast standards department, was one of three network TV vice presidents who discussed television programming with the Memphis Advertising Federation. Also appearing were Thomas J. Swafford, CBS vice president for programs and practices; and Robert D. Kasmir, NBC vice president for corporate affairs. Schneider said the soon-to-be-released report deals with two studies on the effect of television on children.

One of the studies was conducted by Dr. Seymour Lieberman, who studied 10,000 normal school children aged 8-13. A separate five-year study was conducted by Dr. Melvin S. Heller, a child psychiatrist, and the late Samuel Polsky of Temple University.

The Heller-Polsky research examined television violence and its effect on emotionally impaired children and institutionalized children from broken homes who were considered most susceptible to adverse effects.

Monday ???????

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Your challenge is to learn to think ahead. Visualize the probable consequences of changes you must make. It's a year to taper off from longstanding detrimental habits and attitudes. In relationships, you need to decide whether to continue with people who are set in their ways. Today's natives have their own special views of reality, are energetic and usually fond of sports.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Start early to get all the advantages this "extra day" has to offer. Your encouragement of those less fortunate brings tremendous benefits.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Start fresh from where you are with no malice or retribution for anything that is past. Clear away mental clutter and avoid new distractions.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Everyone has some bad interest; the latest news is unrealistic. It's up to you to decide what is best to hold on to and what to discard.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Catch up on local events, but offer no strong opinions. Nothing is easily changed. No one is ready to let go of the past and proceed as logic dictates.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): At family reunions, discuss possible improvements to be shared by all. You can present an idea in such a way as to attract financial backing.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to make yourself and friends happy with whatever is at hand this relatively quiet Sunday. Take part in neighborhood customs without comment.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take the long way around to your destination, even if a billate. People expect you to provide entertainment. Share fun, but don't exceed your budget.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A rest and meditation period is in order. Be patient with older folk, their traditions and problems. Don't leap to conclusions about romance.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hospitality is not only a pleasure to extend; it results in personal enhancement. Consider seriously the emotional needs of those at home.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In jumping at an opportunity, be sure that you get names, facts and figures right. Spending runs over your budget, but circumstances soften the blow.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your higher energy level allows for better planning. If you're doing research, this is a day of discovery. Catch up on correspondence.

Ecumenical Bicentennial

Churches plan patriot year

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

"Ecumenical" is one word for the Long Beach Bicentennial committee's religious activities sub-group here.

Its membership spans the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish communities, along with representation from Mormon, Sikh and Baha'i groups. Involved in its efforts are members of other faiths, among them Unitarian, Buddhism and Greek Orthodox.

"Hardworking" is yet another term for a sub-committee now planning and carrying out activities more or less ending on that archetypal American holiday, Thanksgiving Day 1976.

"Our mood," said Chairman Hugh David Burcham, senior minister of Covenant Presbyterian Church, "is not just one of flag waving or backslapping. Rather it is one calling for a slow, thoughtful assessment of where the United States has come (in a religious and moral sense), the progress that has been made."

"There also is a realization that we've quite some distance yet to go. This is a view to be honestly admitted throughout the year."

DR. H.D. BURCHAM

Dr. Burcham during a recent interview particularly praised the efforts of Fr. Michael Nollin and Rabbi Sidney Guthman, a longtime Long Beach religious leader now serving as president of the Western States Rabbinical Assembly. Fr. Nollin, executive secretary of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles' ecumenical commission, has been assigned here temporarily to assist in ecumenical Bicentennial activities, an assignment many consider almost unprecedented.

Of four major programs slated this year by the religious community, a public study series already is underway. In addition, citywide July 4 services are proposed along with a late-summer "celebration of religious music" and all-city Thanksgiving observances.

The study series, meeting in various houses of worship here, and with speakers of differing per-suaions, "focuses on an overall theme of 'Freedom, Justice and Unity,'" Dr. Burcham said.

For a March 9 meeting at 7:30 p.m. in an Episcopal church, St. Luke's, Atlantic Avenue and 7th Street, a Catholic priest-educator will speak. He is Fr. Francis Colburn, professor of moral theology in St. John's Seminary, Camarillo. Rabbi Guthman, chairing the series subcommittee, also is to head up a panel of commentators who will react to Fr. Colburn's views.

A third and final study is scheduled for May 3 in Temple Israel, 3538 E. 3rd, with a Protestant speaker. The initial program was an early February appearance in a Catholic church of a Jewish historian.

A small but enthusiastic crowd of less than 100 heard and participated in the first event, said Dr. Burcham, extending an invitation to Southlanders to turn out in even larger numbers for the coming programs.

For the 200th Fourth of July observance Long Beach churches are being urged by the religious committee "to do something special" in recalling and celebrating the day, Burcham said. His own Covenant Presbyterian, for instance, is to present a play written by a member of the congregation dealing with major social questions in U.S. history. A picnic is to follow on the church patio.

A celebration of religious music is to be presented Sunday, Aug. 1, in Recreation Park here, noted the minister. All elements within the religious community are being invited to send choirs, orchestras, ensembles and other aggregations to the park for an afternoon-long, open air festival of sacred music.

Plans now are being formulated for a Thanksgiving observance that can and will involve all segments of the religious community here.

People, ideas

when the Jews, returned from captivity, were re-establishing their nation in the Holy Land.

The Assyrian horde lay siege to the little town where Judith lived. The enemy cut off the water supply and it seemed inevitable that the city must fall.

Judith disagreed. She shucked off her widow's gown, doused herself with sexy perfume, put on makeup, donned a gaudy dress that hid little and jewelry. She and her maidservant "defected" to the enemy. The maid carried a sack of Kosher food.

The sex-starved soldiers were over-awed by the enemy woman who looked like a goddess. And so was the general. She told him she would help him win the war but that, according to the rules of her religion, she must be allowed to go to the woods each night to pray and eat Kosher.

The general was willing to grant this gorgeous broad anything.

The next night he gave a big party in her honor. It got a bit moist. Although the text doesn't say so, one may be sure that Judith kept his glass full.

There came the "moment of truth." The guests were shocked out, but alas for the general, he had had too much. He fell into a drunken slumber. Judith took his sword and with two whacks cut off his head, which she put into the Kosher sack.

She and her maid — one would like to know more about that kid — went into woods for midnight devotions. But they didn't pause. They went right home. Next morning the general's head was proudly displayed on the town wall.

The Jewish soldiers, who had been so near surrender, sallied forth. The enemy, confused by the death of their general, fled. The Jews won a decisive victory and took much booty.

It is recorded that thereafter Judith lived as a religious, respected rich woman. She had many suitors but rejected them all. She died at the age of 105.

What does this story mean?

Well, it is the story of ultimate patriotism. It says that a citizen should risk everything to save his people. Judith risked not only her life but her chastity — no small matter for women of her time and class — to break the enemy.

Any girl named Judy has a right walk with pride.

FORGOTTEN BIBLE

The story of Judith is one of the Apocrypha books. The Apocrypha is Bible that isn't quite Bible. The books were mostly written in Greek by Jews who lived in Egypt. The Jewish and Christian councils for one reason or another decided to reject them as Divine Revelation but kept them as worthy literature.

The Apocrypha is not included in most Protestant Bibles, but it is found in Roman and Eastern Orthodox versions.

It is too bad that the Apocrypha is not more often read. It contains hero tales like "Judith," "moralistic maxims, folk sayings, poetry and delightful little stories. One of the best is the fairy tale about Tobit, a righteous Jew who went blind while in exile in Nineveh, and his son, Tobias, who set out to improve the family fortune in Persia. Young Toby is accompanied by a small dog and by the angel Raphael disguised as a man. Toby catches a magic fish. He also finds a bride, still a virgin although widowed by a demon seven times on her wedding nights. And money. He comes home with wife, dog, friendly angel, gold and a magic salve to cure his father's blindness.

As in all good fairy stories, one must read between the lines.

Perhaps the greatest of the Apocrypha are the two books of the Maccabees. The Syrian conqueror tried to stamp out the Jewish religion. He even sacrificed a hog on the Temple altar. The brothers Maccabee and their friends would not accept such treatment. They fled to the mountains and deserts. They struck from ambush and ran to fight another day. Finally they broke the power of the conqueror. Some military scientists say these books are an ideal manual for guerrilla warfare. They are certainly stirring reading for anyone who admires brave and resourceful men.

The Rev. John Stelling, who was recently forced to leave his mission in strife-torn Beirut, Lebanon, will preach Sunday, 8:30 and 11 a.m., at the First Lutheran Church, Ninth Street and Atlantic Avenue.

The Rev. Dick Dillman of the Universal Truths Center, 1120 Pine Ave., will conduct a psychic rally March 6 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

GOINGS ON

"Spiritual and Global Responsibility" will be the theme of the Rev. Dewane Zimmerman, superintendent of the San Diego United Methodist Church District Wednesday, at the beginning of the Lenten series at Los Altos United Methodist Church, 5950 E. Willow St. Following the dinner Dr. Carolyn Stahl, professor of spiritual life at the School of Theology, Claremont, will speak. Dinner reservations should be made by calling the church.

Father Charles T. Sutter will be consecrated and enthroned as bishop of Southern California of the American Independent Orthodox Church today at 5 p.m. at St. Jude's Thaddeus Eastern Rite Catholic Chapel, 145 W. Sixth St.

Mrs. A. George Downing will speak on the American Baptist Churches ministry in Hawaii Sunday, 7 p.m., at the University Baptist Church, 3434 Chetwin Ave.

Ash Wednesday

"Remember, O man, that thou art dust and unto dust thou shalt return."

In many churches next Wednesday the pastor will intone these words and make the sign of the Cross in ashes on the foreheads of old people and little children.

It sounds rather somber, but it is true, as every cemetery testifies. Today or a century from now we will all be dead. Every sane person must accept the fact that he is mortal.

Every true believer knows there is the life of the world to come. But believer or not, we had better realize we are dust.

"They are not long, these days of wine and roses."

Into a little dream Our life discloses, Then closes within a dream."

It is often rather fun while it lasts. But we should all be kind to one another and find whatever joy we can — because we are all condemned to death. This is the message of Ash Wednesday and basic in Christian doctrine.

the Rev. David Reed Speaking

'Some of them were ...in a state of shock'

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

"Somebody yelled, 'Earthquake!,' and part of the roof and balcony caved in on top of the pool. The pool lights went out, and the pool was black with debris. Everybody was screaming—it was like a madhouse in there—some of them were just standing there in a state of shock."

"We just wanted to find our son," said Lillian and Jack Shuman, 464 Adair St., minutes after a balcony and part of a ceiling collapsed over the YWCA swimming pool in downtown Long Beach.

"We looked over in the shallow part of the pool, and some people were pulling the debris off of him. He had been trapped underwater," the anxious parents added while awaiting treatment for their son, George, at St. Mary Medical Center.

George, a 12-year-old seventh grader at Hamilton Junior High School, said he was in the shallow portion of the pool when "there was kind of a cracking sound, and the lifeguard ordered everybody out of the pool."

"Then the ceiling just gave way. Most of the people—there were about 15 or 20 there—were in the middle of the pool, and they didn't have time to get out," he added.

"There was plaster on my back, and I was pinned underwater, but some people came and freed me right away," he said.

GEORGE and his companion, Peter Tolton, also 12, suffered cuts and bruises on their arms and backs when the debris cascaded into the pool.

"I was under water. I didn't hear anything," said Peter. "I just know I was under water, and all of a sudden I couldn't see anything. I was pinned down by all this plaster and stuff, so I just breathed through my face mask until I could kick my way through the plaster."

Peter was among those who freed George, according to the Shumans.

The two youths, both visibly shaken, said most of the debris in the pool consisted of "plaster, beams—like two-by-fours—wires and nails, lots of nails."

Janice Teters, 13, and her brother, Buddy, 12, were also in the pool but were not injured. Their grandmother, Sarah Gibson, 57, was in the balcony when it collapsed. She was reported in good condition at St. Mary Medical Center.

GEORGE, who has been attending the recreational swimming sessions at the YWCA since he was 6 months old, said there were more people than usual in the pool Friday night.

"We've been here many times when there were only three or four people in the pool," he said. "But last week there were about 40—the people at the Y said it was one of the best weeks ever—and this week there were about 20 people there."

The Shumans said they've also taken the boys to the city-owned Belmont Plaza Pool for recreational swimming but that the youths said they preferred the YWCA pool because it's usually less crowded.

Soliah's sister said indicted in bomb case

Associated Press

Kathleen Soliah, the 23-year-old Berkeley woman who may have unwittingly led the FBI to Patricia Hearst, has been indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury, it was reported Friday.

The secret indictment, returned Thursday before Judge Jack E. Goertzen, named Miss Soliah in connection with the planting of pipe bombs under two Los Angeles police cars last summer, the Los Angeles Times reported.

She is the sister of Steven Soliah, 27, who is now in Sacramento where his trial on bank robbery charges is scheduled to start March 8. Miss Hearst has said she lived with Soliah prior to her capture in a San Francisco apartment.

Details of the exact charges filed against Miss Soliah have yet to be disclosed, and it was not known whether others were named in the indictment. Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael Marcus presented the case to the grand jury but would not comment on it.

The whereabouts of Miss Soliah are unknown, authorities said.

Two pipe bombs were found on the ground under police cars on Aug. 22, authorities said. Both explosive devices were similar in construction, wrapped in plastic and contained triggering devices. They were defused without incident.

Embassy death settlement bared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The husband of a woman who died of cancer after working at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow received a settlement from the U.S. government in a lawsuit that said she was a victim of radiation, informed sources said Friday.

The compensation, understood to be less than $10,000, was made on grounds she had received inadequate medical care, it was learned.

The woman, a secretary, died in 1968. Her husband was an administrative officer at the embassy and currently works at the State Department.

A marked increase in the intensity of Soviet microwave beams at the embassy six months ago has raised concerns about the health of Ambassador Walter Stoessel Jr., his staff and visitors.

SOURCES say the Russians were trying to jam rooftop devices they believed were being used to eavesdrop on the conversations of Soviet officials living and working in the downtown area of the Soviet capital.

Dr. William Watson, medical director of the department, said that "the medical division has found no medical problems that it believes to be related to the situation at the embassy."

However, it was learned that the medical records of embassy personnel dating back some 20 years were being checked.

"I would not exclude that as one of the things we are doing to protect the health of our people," an official here said privately.

Earlier, the department disclosed that a medical technician had been sent to Moscow to conduct blood tests on embassy personnel.

THE technician, Robert Griffin, replaces a part-time technician. A new physician, Dr. Sam Zweifel, was sent to Moscow Feb. 20 to oversee the blood tests.

The department's press office described Zweifel, 50, as a family practitioner and said he had been sent to Moscow simply to allow Dr. Thomas Johnson, the physician normally on duty, to go on a three-week vacation.

Normally, when the embassy doctor takes leave, the U.S. workers are treated by the British physician or a doctor at another embassy. Acknowledging a departure, Robert L. Funseth, the department spokesman, said, "The employees would feel more comfortable if they had their own colleague there."

PRIVATELY, as well as publicly, department officials willing to discuss the situation insist that no causal connection has been established between the microwave emissions and any illness.

In the case of the woman secretary whose husband sued, an official suggested that the compensation was actually paid on the basis of faulty medical diagnosis and had nothing to do with the Soviet beams.

Reached at his home, the husband declined to discuss the case. "I don't think it would serve any purpose," he said.

would be left with something near the same tax status as now prevails as a result of the two tax cuts approved last year.

—The $3.3-billion Social Security tax increase asked by Ford would be rejected.

—Elderly Americans would not be faced with the higher charges Ford proposes to pay for existing Medicare benefits, a start would be made on the first program of national health insurance for all Americans, and up to $2 billion more a year would be provided state and local governments in revenue-sharing funds.

The Finance Committee actions were part of the new procedures designed to give Congress tighter control over the budget-making process. Using reports from the Finance Committee and the other legislative panels, the Senate Budget Committee will propose a congressional budget by April 15.

IN OUTLINING his 1977 budget last month, Ford called for a tax cut of about $29 billion, which is around $10 billion more than the tax reductions enacted last year.

Almost as soon as the Ford budget was made public, Long said the nation would be better off if that "extra" $10 billion were used to improve health, welfare and Social Security programs.

Long used stronger language this week in successfully bringing his colleagues around to his point of view.

"In effect we're going to play Scrooge by taking from these poor old people" whose Medicare charges Ford proposed to raise and giving the money to more affluent Americans as tax cuts.

"Some poor old soul is going to be thrown out of the hospital on his ear and left to die in the street... We can't afford that $10-billion tax cut if that's how you're going to pay for it," Long said.

CLENCHED-FIST salute by Patricia Hearst after her 1975 arrest reflected "confusion," not guerrilla defiance, psychiatrist testified Friday.

has already testified that she never wrote to her family and refused Wendy's suggestions that she contact them.

The Harrises, now in jail in Los Angeles awaiting trial, recently stated that Patty was not under their control, that they lived apart and Patty often went grocery shopping alone, took hikes, visited a doctor and went to a laundry without them.

Lifton told Bancroft that Patty never told him about going to movies, or visiting a laundry or attending college classes during the "missing year." He said he never asked her about a Sacramento City College registration card, in the name of Sue Hendricks, which was found in Patty's apartment when she was arrested.

A Yale psychiatrist who began his research on brainwashing in the 1950s, interviewing and treating repatriates from the Chinese prison camps, Lifton listed eight methods used in those camps and then told chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey that Miss Hearst was exposed "in some aspect" to every one of them.

LIFTON'S testimony was briefly interrupted by the illness of one of the jurors, Mrs. Helen Westin, 54, who has been suffering from nausea. She hastily left the jury box, her handkerchief over her face, during the direct examination, but returned after a brief court recess.

Before the psychiatrist testified, and in the absence of the jurors, Bailey told U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter that the defense was "reluctantly" withdrawing a motion to introduce lie-detector evidence.

Carter had set a hearing to determine the admissibility of polygraph evidence, but Bailey said that if it were allowed "it could be construed as a waiver" of his objections to the court order that forced Miss Hearst to take the Fifth Amendment.

Lifton told the jurors that Miss Hearst went through everything—dehumanization, terror, death anxiety, self-betrayal, guilt, isolation, confession, compliance—suffered by the men and women he has interviewed who have been survivors of enemy imprisonments.

WHEN she was captured, he said, she was suffering from "the survivor syndrome—traumatic neurosis," but is showing a remarkable recovery because she is beginning to hate the captors who "brutalized" her.

"When I saw her last Saturday," he said, "she asked me, 'How could they be so cruel to another human being?'" After she revisited with her jury the small closets in which she was kept blindfolded for 57 days by the SLA, Lifton said, she cried out to him: "My God, how could they do that to another person?"

The psychiatrist said that when repatriated prisoners came back from China, Korea, World War II and Vietnam, some of them continued to echo ideological rhetoric or said their captors had been kind to them. This same thing happened with Miss Hearst, he said, as indicated by her clenched-fist salute, and by her signing herself into jail as an urban guerrilla.

MISS Hearst was even more "confused" than most repatriates, Lifton said, because two of her captors, the Harrises, were arrested with her, and he pointed out to the jurors: "Your captors don't usually come back with you." Because of this, he explained, she had "difficulty in clarifying the end of her role" as "Tania the guerrilla."

tified other persons she met in New York City and at the farmhouse but did not mention Miss Boudin.

Her attorney, F. Lee Bailey, said last week that one of the reasons his client invoked the Fifth Amendment to a series of questions was because she feared for her life. "She has already named many people she fears, but others have not yet been named," he said.

Mrs. Catherine Hearst, Patricia's mother, also expressed concern for her daughter's life during an exclusive interview last week. "Patty knows these people... She knows what they're capable of doing," Mrs. Hearst said. "And their underground network of terrorism extends across the country."

Miss Boudin, a one-time magna cum laude at Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania, is wanted in Chicago for her participation in the violent Days of Rage in October 1969. In addition to taking part in a damaging rampage in Chicago's downtown area, she also attempted to lead a group of club-wielding women radicals from the lakefront Grant Park.

mura, a Berkeley artist who had fled the Bay Area in 1972 after police learned of Miss Yoshimura's alleged involvement in a bomb plot on the University of California campus.

The hunt for both Miss Hearst and Miss Yoshimura came to an end last Sept. 18 when they were seized in an apartment here within an hour of the arrest of the Harris couple.

Investigators believe that Miss Yoshimura may have used her connections with the Weather Underground to aid in her escape from this area to the East Coast.

It could not be immediately determined what the purpose was of having Miss Boudin meet "Tania," the revolutionary name given to Miss Hearst by the SLA. In its publications, the Weather group had been critical of the "military-like" tactics adopted by the SLA. However, before her capture, the publications praised Miss Hearst for joining in a revolution "against the capitalists."

In her testimony, Miss Hearst iden-

Rams tumble Inglewood

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

A one-point loss to Poly a week ago may have been a blessing in disguise for Millikan High.

The Rams, hitting an eye-opening 64 per cent (32-of-50) of their shots, ran off with a 79-70 first-round CIF 4-A victory at Bay League champion Inglewood Friday night.

Forward Rhett Heckel led the way with 24 points, center John White added 20 and guards Doug Marty and Jim Whalen chipped in with 14 and 13 respectively to spark another remarkably well-balanced attack.

The new twist for a Bill

Odell-coached team, however, was a 1-2-2 zone defense, one that Odell had used at times with what he thought was great effectiveness a week ago in a tough 61-60 setback to Moore League champion and top-seeded Poly.

"I thought it enabled us to control the tempo just as it had against Poly," he said, noting that it was especially true when White and forwards Heckel, Hal Goodwin and Steve Trefzger were in foul trouble.

The victory, although a decisive one against an Inglewood team that had dominated a strong league, was not without more than a few anxious moments for Odell.

The Rams scored three quick baskets in the final 54 seconds of the first quarter to take a seven-point (24-17) lead and seemed on the verge of making the game a runaway, drawing out to a 45-33 halftime advantage.

But everything went wrong during the first 3:30 of the third quarter.

Goodwin and White drew their fourth fouls, the Rams seemed uncertain against Inglewood's aggressive trap press, and suddenly what had been a comfortable lead was cut to 47-45 when forward Tony Shaw connected on a 14-foot baseline basket at 3:00.

Centennial ousts Saints

By RICK ARTHUR
Staff Writer

Having met and conquered one Long Beach team, Centennial High probably will try to do it again next week.

The Apaches, 51-42 victors over host St. Anthony Friday night in the first round of the CIF 4-A basketball playoffs, will try their ambush act Tuesday against Poly—provided the top-seeded Jackrabbits dispose of Fontana tonight.

Centennial, the Bay League second-place team, used poise and speed to prevail against the Saints, the Angelus League co-champions.

Entering the contest with a 12-11 record, the Apaches, sparked by flashy 5-8 guard Lorenzo Watts, overcame an early six-point deficit, scored 14 points in a row in a span of 6:23 covering the second and third quarters, and survived a St. Anthony rally in the final minute.

The Jack Errion-coached Saints, who finished the season with a 13-12 record, had difficulty with a 2-1-2 zone defense and zone press that limited the efforts of guards Dave Ramsey and Lance Dietrich.

While neither team shot well from the field or from the free throw line, the key statistic may have been turnovers—only one for the Apaches and 12 for the Saints, indicating the effectiveness of the winners' press.

A Ralph Esposito layin, two free throws by Jim Donnelly, two outside jumpers by Ramsey and a 20-footer by Dietrich led to St. Anthony's biggest lead of the contest, a 10-4 advantage with 3:52 remaining in the first quarter.

Then Watts, bedazzling throughout the game with his swiftness and body control, scored his first of 17 points on a foul shot at 3:37, added a layin at 0:52 and handed off the first of six assists at 0:08 (Reggie Sirls scoring from underneath) to trim the deficit to 10-9 at the end of the period.

LBCC boosts title streak to 4, 77-74

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Long Beach City College wasn't acting like a team that had just clinched its fourth consecutive Metropolitan Conference basketball title Friday night.

There were no dunkings in the shower, few congratulatory handshakes and no backslapping by the 12-man squad following a tight, 77-74 victory over Bakersfield before more than 1,500 appreciative fans.

Spokesmen Guy King and Dean Decker said the Vikings were taking the title in stride.

"We're winners. We have a tradition here. You know that," King said.

said Decker. "This was more like a football game tonight."

Playmaker Decker stood at center court with friends discussing his second successive trip to the state junior college basketball playoffs in Fresno, March 11, and King, who tallied 23 points in the win, sauntered back and forth from the water fountain to the locker room. Forward Rod Dalton spoke of religion and food following his 14-point output.

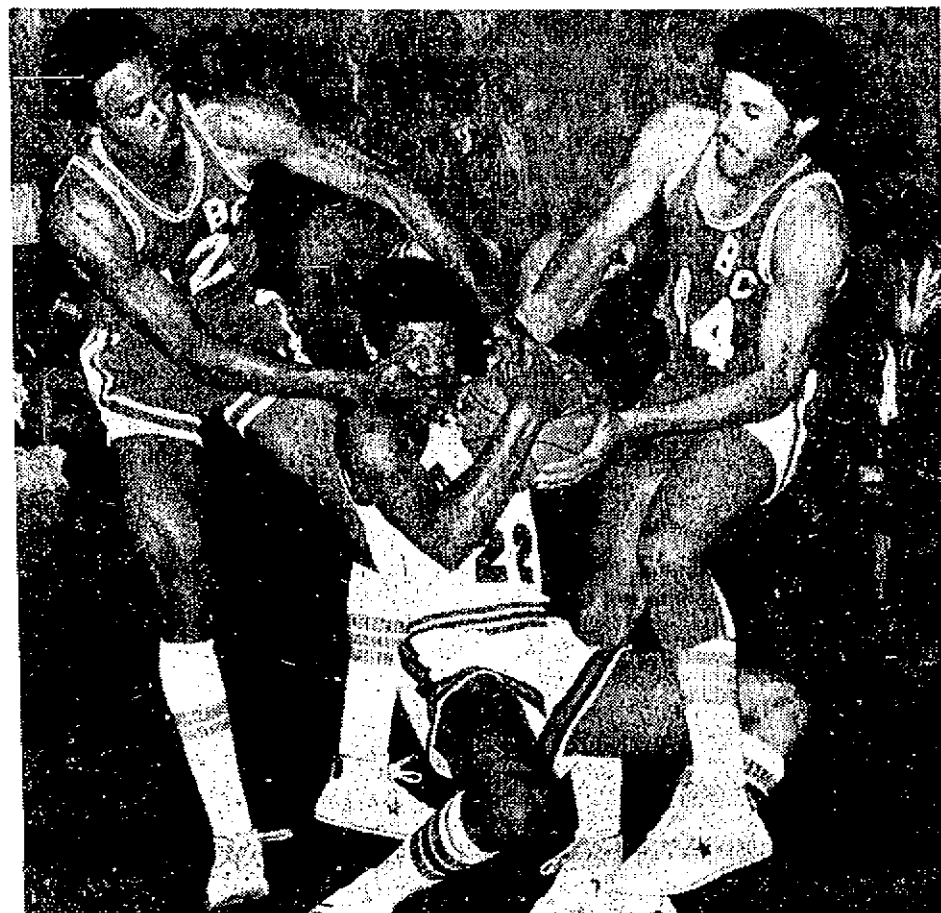

The only thing that resembled a celebration was the cutting down of the net at the Vikings' side of the court. Reserve guard Jeff Peters won that honor, and following a boost from Doug Simmons tossed it into a crowd of well-wishers.

The only words of relief came from LBCC coach Bill Fraser.

"I'm deeply gratified," he said about his third title in as many years as Viking coach, "that we came back like we did under so much pressure. I was really distraught when we blew that two-game lead a week ago, but it's given me a great deal of satisfaction to see these guys come back with a great deal of courage."

The Renegades took advantage of the Vikings' carelessness in the final seven-and-one-half minutes and nearly threw the conference into a two-way tie between the Vikings and Pierce College, which demolished East Los Angeles, 102-77.

The Vikings held a 61-46 lead with 7:40 to go, but key steals by Nishell Jackson and reserve forward Thomas Wilson, and ensuing

UCLA breezes, nears 10th title

BERKELEY (AP) — Marques Johnson hit on each of his 11 field goal attempts and all five of his free throw tries Friday night to score 27 points and lead UCLA to a 113-93 victory over California in a Pacific-8 Conference game.

The Bruins moved to within two games of their 10th successive Pac-8 championship by dominating the first half when they built a 61-38 lead. They were outscored, 55-52, in the second half, but their 113 total broke the Harmon Gym scoring record the Bruins set here in 1967.

"It was our best game this year, both offensively and defensively," coach Gene Bartow said.

Cal led 5-4 when UCLA ran off 11 points in a row—nine by Johnson—and gradually expanded its lead. The Bruins shot 66 per cent in the first half and 56 per cent from the floor for the game in what Cal coach Dick Edwards called an "awesome" display.

Rich Washington, who had 22 points for UCLA, led in rebounds with 10 as the Bruins outrebounded Cal, 51-31.

Center Dave Greenwood added 14 points to bring the UCLA front line total to 63, and guard Ray Townsend also hit for 14 including 5-for-5 on outside shots in the first half.

Senior guard Rickie Hawthorne paced Cal with 21 points, and Gene Ransom made 18, with 12 coming on free throws. Cal, 3-9 in Pac-8 play against UCLA's 10-2, made 46 per cent of its field goal attempts.

UCLA held a 26-point lead when the teams began large-scale substituting with about five minutes remaining.

The Bruins were jolted last weekend when Oregon beat them, 65-45, to end a 98-game winning string on the UCLA floor and keep baskets by Jackson, Jon White and forward John Fox led the 'Gades on a 27-14 run that forced Fraser to utilize several timeouts to slow the turnaround.

"I had to tell them the facts of life," he mused about his final timeout with less than a minute remaining. "I told them who to get the ball to and who was to take it out and what to do with it. They still didn't do it as I had planned."

Jackson's steal and lay-up with 34 seconds remaining cut the Vikings' lead to three, 75-72, but seconds later the former Panther fouled King as the 6-6 sophomore center attempted to slam-dunk his ninth field goal of the evening. King silenced the Renegades, hitting both free throws to give Long Beach a five-point advantage with 25 seconds remaining.

49ERS ENTERTAIN SAN DIEGO AND PCAA TITLE HOPE

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The Long Beach State basketball team will be trying to roll a seven tonight when it ends its season against San Diego State in the Long Beach Arena.

The Pacific Coast Athletic Association encounter, which begins at 8 o'clock, will be broadcast on KFOX and KSUL-FM. The 49er junior varsity will play the intramural all-stars in a 5:45 prelim.

Three things could happen to the 49ers tonight:

- They could win a seventh consecutive PCAA crown by beating the Aztecs—if Fresno State topples visiting Cal State Fullerton.
- They could tie for the title by losing to San Diego State—if Fresno defeats Fullerton.
- They could lose the title by losing to San Diego State—if Fullerton beats Fresno.

So says 49er coach Dwight Jones.

"It will be a lot easier for us to come back from Thursday's game than it will be for Fullerton," Jones said.

"There was a lot of tension in Thursday's game. If you'll remember, several players shot 'air' balls. I think our kids will be more relaxed Saturday and will probably play with a little more confidence.

"Beside, there's a natural rivalry between Long Beach and San Diego, and our kids always seem to get up for the Aztecs."

If a league championship isn't enough motivation, the 49ers can recall a 79-52 drubbing at the hands of the Aztecs the first time the teams met this year.

"I don't want the guys too 'high,'" says Jones. "The thing we have to remember is that San Diego is an excellent basketball team. We've got to control the tempo or we're in trouble."

Actually, the Aztecs were a good team. When they drubbed Long Beach they were 3-0 in league, and in their next outing they nudged San Jose State to improve their record to 4-0. But they haven't won since, dropping six games in a row, including five PCAA contests.

"We have tremendous respect for them," counters Jones. "Our kids believe that San Diego has the best talent in the league."

The Aztecs probably do have the most talented player in 6-6 senior Steve Copp, the conference's best defender, who is averaging 18 points and nine rebounds a game.

Lakers snap 3-game skid, 97-90

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

At this stage of the season any win is a good win for the Lakers.

They beat the Kansas City Kings, 97-90, at the Forum Friday night, but it wasn't the kind of performance which would indicate their future is bright.

Trying to look on the cheery side, coach Bill Sharman praised his team's defense, and you couldn't deny that the Lakers made a respectable effort there.

The worst defensive team in the NBA, they have held opponents to 90 points or less only four times. So Sharman at least had reason to be encouraged.

But the Kings are a disorganized bunch and they showed little spark. Even exciting Nate Archibald wasn't his usual self, partly due to the defense of Lucius Allen.

The tempo was slow. The Lakers' fast break hasn't been producing the desired results in recent weeks.

Sharman has instructed his athletes to wait for Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who usually launches the break, but can't keep up with it when he has to play so many minutes. Jabbar is averaging 42 minutes a game, highest in the league.

The Lakers waited for their talented center, then got the ball to him at the right time. He converted 27 points to lead both teams in scoring.

In breaking a three-game losing streak, the Lakers led all the way until the Kings caught them at 70. But Abdul-Jabbar hit a basket, Donnie Freeman added one and reserve Don Ford scored twice to complete an 8-0 blitz.

That was the end of the Kings, whose concentration was so poor that Larry McNeill called a time out in the waning seconds when his team had none left. A technical foul was assessed.

Forward Corky Calhoun, far more effective as a starter than as a sub, contributed 16 points, hitting 8 of 11 shots.

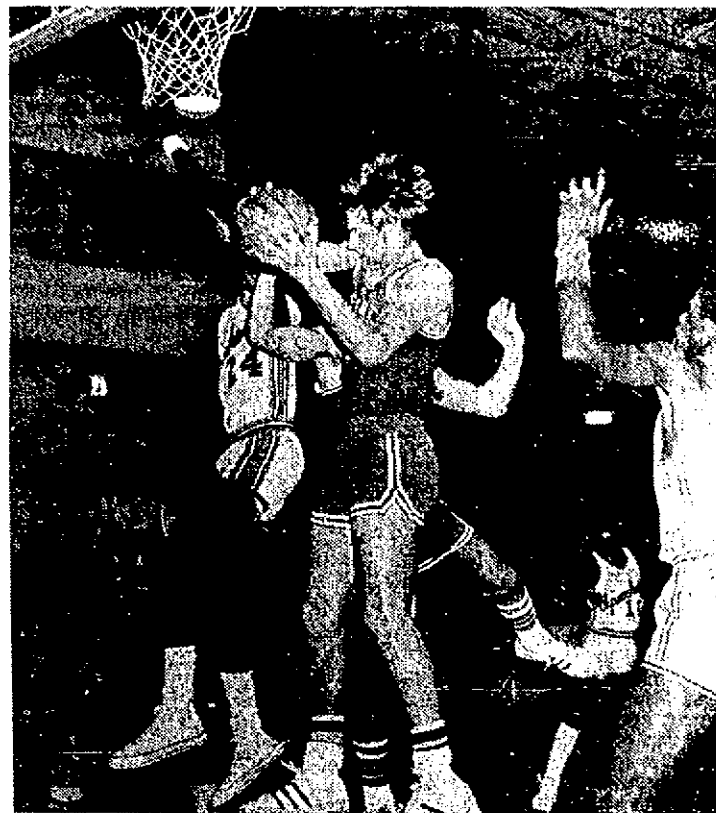

Calhoun, the Lakers' top defender, is hitting 50 per cent since he became a starter as opposed to 38 per cent when he was coming off the bench.

"They sag so much on Kareem that I have high-percentage shots," explained Calhoun. "When you play more you shoot with more confidence."

Gail Goodrich hit only 6 of 17 from the field and admitted that the fractured little finger on his right hand bothered him. The Lakers must get more from him if they are to qualify for the playoffs.

The win was the Lakers' 30th, matching last year's season total. It also moved them within one game of second-place Seattle, which lost in Boston.

Cleveland, with nine wins in its last 10 games, comes to the Forum Sunday. Coach Bill Fitch scouted the Lakers Friday. What he saw should have made him happy.

Compton falls to Mater Dei

Mater Dei guard Jim Elenz tossed in 27 points as the Monarchs upended Compton, 50-48, Friday night in the first round of the CIF-Southern Section basketball playoffs at Mater Dei.

The Monarchs employed a full-court press in the opening period and jumped off to an early 11-2 bulge. Elenz, who hit 9-of-18 from the field, scored 13 of his points in the quarter which ended with the Monarchs on top, 18-10.

But the second quarter belonged to the Tarabes. With Monarch center Bruce Hayes on the bench with three fouls, Compton whittled away at the defi-

The Tarabes took over where they left off in the second half and quickly jumped to a 35-31 lead.

Mater Dei coach Jerry Tardie called a timeout and the Monarchs returned to the court in a 1-3-1 trap defense. The alignment pressured Compton into several key turnovers and Mater Dei regained the lead for good at 39-27.

USC stumbles again—0-12

STANFORD (AP) — Sophomore guard Jay Carter helped douse a second-half comeback by USC with 10 points in the final eight minutes as Stanford defeated the winless Trojans, 96-83, in a Pacific-8 Conference game Friday night.

The Cardinals outscored the Trojans, 16-2, early in the game to pull to a 22-8 lead.

USC caught up at 68-68 with nine minutes to play behind Greg White's 12 second-half points. White then got into foul trouble, and the Cardinals pulled ahead again.

The Cardinals increased their lead to 92-77 and coasted to the victory.

The win broke Stanford's seven-game conference losing streak and brought its record to 2-10 in the Pac-8—its only victories over USC—and 8-18 over-all.

USC is winless in the conference with an 0-12 record and is 11-14 over-all.

USC coach Bob Boyd said, "We were guilty of not being able to sustain our own momentum after we gained a tie. We then rushed our shots and our defense broke down."

"Perhaps our own back log of losses took its toll," Stanford coach Dick DeVos said, "I was particularly pleased in the second half with the way the team reacted to USC's comeback. The momentum shifted, we started standing around, SC got aggressive and suddenly it was a tie game.

"Tonight we worked our way through our problems. It was very gratifying."

CIF begins with surprises

Lynwood opened its bid for a 3-A CIF title with a smashing 95-72 performance over Bolsa Grande Friday.

Tom Freeman scored 34 points and Darrell Allums added 24 as Lynwood turned back the Matadors.

Freeman scored 16 points in the first quarter and 24 in the second as the Knights opened a 55-34 halftime lead.

Freeman hit 13-of-19 field goal shots and Allums sank 10-of-15 goals as Lynwood connected on 40-of-63 floor shots.

Freeman (13) and Allums (11) also dominated the backboards.

Steve Slusher led Bolsa with 18.

Brian Lumsden poured in 23 points and grabbed nine rebounds as Warren claimed a 73-52, 3-A win from Arroyo Grande.

Rich Branning, who averaged 27 points per game on the season, was held to 19.

Cliff Sanchez scored 15 points, including the winning basket with 54 seconds to play, to lift Verbum Del over Fountain Valley, 49-47.

Jim Holland tallied for the Barons with three seconds to play but Verbum Del ran out the clock.

Despite Perry Harbin's 25 points, Alhambra edged Huntington Beach, 79-76.

BLAKE WITHERS connected on 5-of-6 fourth period field goals and 8-of-10 in the second half to lead two-time defending 2-A champion El Dorado past Neff, 57-50.

Leading, 41-37, after three periods, El Dorado sank three consecutive baskets to move ahead, 47-37, to begin the final quarter.

Neff, behind Craig Kulonis' 18 points, cut that margin to 51-45, but El Dorado gradually increased its lead to 55-47 with 1:57 to play.

Aviation's backcourt of Don Morrow (14) and John Moon (15) combined for 29 points to send Artesia to a 69-61 defeat.

After completing the first period in a 17-1 tie, Aviation rolled for 20 points in the second quarter to gain a 37-29 halftime lead, an advantage never threatened.

Manuel Robles scored 17 for Artesia and Tom O'Brien added 12 points.

Tim Shaw scored all of his team's four points in overtime to lead Canyon past Valley Christian, 65-64.

Valley Christian, trailing 40-40 after three periods, scrambled to tie the game in regulation play when Roger Swaving connected on a jump shot with 35 seconds to play.

Gahr upsets, Santa Barbara trips St. John

45-44

By GREG VAUGHAN Staff Writer

Fifth-ranked Gahr High saw its bid for a 2-A CIF championship end abruptly Friday night when Dusky Dvorak swished a 15-footer with 32 seconds remaining to give visiting Laguna Beach a 45-44 upset victory.

"We were lucky," said an exuberant Artist coach Ed Burlingham while being mobbed by team members following the game.

"We played good defense and forced them to take bad shots at the end. We knew that we'd have to score against the press to beat them."

The host Gladiators appeared headed for victory when center Harold Homsher hit a 15-foot jumper from the top of the key with 2:50 remaining for a 42-37 lead. Gahr, which had rallied from a seven-point, second-quarter deficit, had gained the lead by employing its intimidating full-court press—despite Artist efforts.

Laguna helped Gladiator matters by missing seven consecutive free throws during the second half.

The Artists, finally adjusting to the Gladiator press, got two quick points on a wide-open layup by Ben Bacon, cutting the score to 42-39. Frank Silva was called for charging at Gahr's end of the court, and suddenly the momentum had dramatically shifted.

Bacon, who emerged the Laguna hero with eight final-quarter points, sank both ends of a one-plus-one situation, and the Artists trailed by one, 42-41, with 1:43 seconds remaining.

Leading scorer Rodney Brandon produced Gahr's last hurrah, grabbing the rebound from his own missed shot and putting in a short banker before crashing to the floor.

The Artists broke the full-court pressure again, and Bacon scored from underneath with 49 seconds remaining. Trailing 44-43, Laguna forced a turnover on a press of its own, and Dvorak hit his game-winning shot from the baseline.

Gahr had plenty of opportunities the final half-minute. Silva missed from the corner, but Brandon pulled down the rebound and was fouled. He missed the ensuing free throw, Laguna rebounded, lost control, and was forced into a jump-ball situation with 10 seconds remaining.

Gahr controlled the tip, but Greg Riphagen missed a 20-footer and another jump ball followed. This time Laguna controlled with four ticks remaining, leaving the contest.

Santa Barbara High overcame the hot shooting of Don Carfino with a balanced game to defeat No. 2-ranked St. John Bosco, 58-50, in the first round of the CIF 4-A basketball playoffs Friday night.

Forward Steve Crandall, who scored 18 points, got the Dons off to a fast start with eight points in the first period and Santa Barbara led almost the entire game.

Santa Barbara jumped to a 10-2 lead behind Crandall's 4-of-4 shooting, but almost lost the advantage defending the long-range shooting of Carfino.

After bringing the Braves to within two, 14-12, with six points in the opening period, Carfino exploded for 12 in the second to put Bosco into a 2-26 halftime lead. The 6-2 guard, selected Most Valuable Player in the Del Rey League, hit 5-of-8 shots in the quarter and finished with 26 points.

"We knew they (the Braves) had a couple of good guards, but you don't know how good they are until you actually play against them," said winning coach Jack Trigueiro.

"I thought Carfino did a helluva job, and when he got out they came back with (Willie) Sonoma. You couldn't ask for a better pair of guards."

Carfino, who was limited to eight in the second half, fouled out as Santa Barbara put the game away with free throws in the final minute. Sonoma scored six points in the Braves late rally to finish with 18.

Santa Barbara's Geoff Shelton hit seven foul shots, including the two that tied the game with 31 seconds remaining, to lead his team to an 18-13 margin in a rough fourth quarter. Shelton tallied nine for the Dons, who also received strong performances from James Hunter (12) and Ed White (10).

Trigueiro said the physical play was an obstacle for his squad.

"It benefits their (Bosco's) game because they're more spread out, they run more," he said. "But we didn't turn the ball over much—we had nine—and our rebounding was strong."

Santa Barbara grabbed a 36-26 edge on the boards, led by Crandall's 11.

POLY LAUNCHES CIF TITLE CHASE

By KEN PIVERNETZ Staff Writer

Fontana High has the dubious honor of meeting the CIF's No. 1 seeded basketball team in its play-off opener for the second year in a row tonight at Long Beach City College when the Steelers take on Poly.

"I hope that we make a better showing than last year," said Fontana coach Terry O'Keefe, recalling a 111-56 loss to Verbum Dei.

"Everything we've heard about Poly, though—it's just them and 31 teams to fill out the field."

A 61-60 squeaker over Millikan a week ago was one of the few close wins in that stand.

"We didn't play with the enthusiasm or intensity that we will need in the playoffs," said coach Ron Palmer. "Despite the success we've had this season, there is still plenty of incentive. We want to play in the Long Beach Arena," he added, in reference to the 4-A semifinals and finals in two weeks.

Poly and Fontana know very little about each other.

Palmer was expecting to draw an Orange County school; Fontana was just hoping to get in the playoffs after winning Tuesday night to clinch third place in the Citrus Bell League.

The Steelers, 15-8 over-all, are paced by three-year letterman Paul Wilson, a 6-5 center who has averaged 26.3 points and 21.4 rebounds this season. A quality athlete, Wilson is the defending state long jump (24-3/4) champion.

Valise Fowler, a 6-3 junior guard, averages 16.0. Six-foot-four Mario Mancha averages 12.0 at one forward, while little 5-7 Lester Valesonia is almost as tall as his name is long.

Jordan pitcher fires no-hitter

Miracles and near-miracles weren't good enough for wins in several high school baseball games Friday.

Katella High got a triple play against Laora, but fell 9-3, and Cypress no-hit Esperanza and lost 1-0 on two walks, a stolen base and an error.

Jordan and Cerritos had better luck, though, winning no-hitters, 5-0 and 7-0, Glendale and El Toro.

Jordan's Terry O'Toole struck out seven and walked only two. Eddie Irvine singled and doubled to drive in a pair of runs, and Herb Pauland went 2-4 with two RBI to lead the Panthers.

Cerritos' 7-0 no-hit victory over El Toro was a group affair, as three pitchers combined to turn the trick. Phil Wilson started and was relieved by Louie Sozola in the third. John Carroll came on in the last inning to complete the feat.

Cerritos' Perry Wilson and Robby Beatty were both 2-for-3, and Wilson had two RBI.

The Katella triple play occurred in the second inning with two runners on. Shortstop Burt Patrick snagged a line drive and tossed to second to double up the runner who had strayed too far from the bag. The throw to first also nailed an errant Saxon.

Cypress hurler Russ Tenfold no-hit Etna through six innings, and reliever Tom Schlett did the same in the seventh, but two walks, a steal of third and a pickoff attempt that sailed into left field pushed across the winning run.

Wilson High committed seven errors and fell to Bolsa Grande 4-1. Bruin shortstop Kim Warr had four of Wilson's six hits but also contributed four of his misuses as Wilson's record dropped to 2-2. John Hockenberry hit a two-run homer in the second to decide the game.

La Mirada shut out La Serna 6-0, as Greg Moyer and Steve Needham scattered three hits. Gary Ledbetter had two RBI to lead the seven-hit Matadors to a 4-1 win.

A walk, an error, two singles and two ground outs were good for a four-run sixth-inning rally for Downey in turning back Pioneer, 5-1. Richard Pohl struck out four, walked two and gave up four hits in the win.

El Rancho put together three two-run rallies and turned back Mayfair 6-1.

Pro golf: 'Great American Dream'

By EDWIN POPE
Knight News Service

LAUDERHILL, Fla. — Fred Marti earned $11,024 in pro golf last year.
His expenses were slightly less than $11,000.
Yet, from the fiscal pit, Fred Marti sees pro golf as "the great American dream."

Marti is 35. That is a bit late in the day to start becoming a superstar.
"But suppose I could get it all together and make a million bucks over the next five years," Marti says. "I'd be set for life. It's not impossible. The thing about pro golf is that you can earn what you're worth. There aren't any advance contracts. That's what the great American dream is all about, isn't it?"

It also is why golf's intrinsic free enterprise system keeps the game cresting while other mass-appeal sports struggle against public hostility through the twists and turns of litigation and legislation.

"I'm not about to criticize any other pro athletes,"

Marti says, waiting for a dry cloud in the $300,000 Tournament Players Championship. But if some other pro sports had our system, there might not be all these revolts.

Golf offers no guarantee except opportunity. A golfer who strikes the ball with sufficient skill will make it. A player who doesn't, won't.

"The great American dream" that Marti sees in golf is as jagged with peril as it is packed with potential. Travel expenses alone cost a golfer between $15,000 and $100,000 annually, depending upon his stature and tastes.

Only 45 of golf's 296 money-winners went above $50 grand in 1975.

Actually, $100,000 will barely cover the travel tab of a Jack Nicklaus or Arnold Palmer. They lease jets and live in suites. "But our case is a little different," the 46-year-old Palmer (winner of only $59,017 last year) concedes from his corporate throne. "Jack and I have been fortunate in some business connections."

J.C. Snead hasn't. Snead's $91,822 in official earnings last year represents most of his income. J.C. is not nearly so penurious as his uncle, Sam, who flings dimes around like they are railroad flatcars, but he is hardly extravagant. "My travel ran me between $35,000 and $40,000, and that doesn't mean fancy hotels or drinking in fancy bars. I don't go that route."

"Just figure it by the week. Entry fee, $50. Caddy, average about $150. Motel, around $200. Food runs you $300 if you have your wife and maybe children with you. That comes out to a bare minimum of $700 a week, multiplied by 30 tournaments, for a total of $21,000. It doesn't include all the air fare, taxes, your home, car, clothes, and all the other things that anybody has to spend money on."

Ben Crenshaw won $83,000 in two weeks. Crenshaw, only 24, calls it "a mighty good life, even if it is expensive. My wife Polly and I try to stay in the better places, and fly first-class, because it makes me feel better and play better. If you're spending $35,000 a year, you'd better be in the frame of mind to get out there and win something."

The magnificent exception to the win-big, spend-big pattern is Doug Sanders.

Sanders, 42, has won a niggling $9,844 in official money the last two years. That's less than one-sixth of the $60,000 first prize in the TPC.

Yet his expenses dwarf those of Nicklaus and Palmer and even free-swinging Lee Trevino.

"Obviously I couldn't travel like I do on what I'm winning on tour," Sanders says. "Let's just say I'm diversified." Commercial endorsements and investments in the latter seasons of his 18-year pro career have enabled Sanders to acquire a Houston mansion, complete with wine cellar.

"I learned from the master," Sanders smiles, tipping $1.50 for a $2.50 sandwich in Inverrary's coffee shop. "Old Dutch Harrison."

Owners-players faceoff continues

NEW YORK — With a circuit court decision on the reserve clause appeal by baseball owners expected next week, negotiations between management and the Major League Players Association proceeded cautiously Friday.

"There was a fruitful exchange of views and ideas," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association. "But we haven't bridged the gap."

Could a settlement come soon?
"You never can tell," Miller said. "I've seen complex problems resolved in a remarkably short time. This certainly is complex."

Approximately 25 players, led by pitching ace Tom Seaver, began spring training on their own Friday in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Included in the group were Willie Stargell, Jerry Reuss, Don Kessinger, Ted Simmons, Del Unser, Jon Matlack, Jerry Grote and Bud Harrelson.

Fans 'turned off' by hassling—Rozelle

TAMPA, Fla. — National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday that there is no question in his mind that sports fans are being turned off by constant legal wrangling.

"I've seen it in our mail, I've seen it in polls. The public is getting turned off," Rozelle said.

"There is enough on the front page to irritate them and cause them to worry. They turn to the sports pages for entertainment. If we cause more flack than we give entertainment, then sports are going to suffer."

BRIEFLY: Barring unusually heavy snowfall in the northern Sierra Nevada mountains, next week's World Cup races scheduled for Heavenly Valley will be moved to Copper Mountain, Colorado. Hugh Killebrew, president of Heavenly Valley, said the snow cover at the California resort is inadequate for staging an international ski race.

Jimmy Connors, vowing to get down to work after a year of "messing around," takes on Manuel Orantes of Spain today in a $25,000 winner-take-all tennis challenge at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas. Businessman Bob Short says he believes the San Francisco Giants of the National League and the Oakland A's of the American League could both survive in the Bay area if his group's deal for acquisition of the Giants goes through. Football fans in Miami lined up Friday to buy a piece of football history: the Orange Bowl's artificial turf, selling at $2 a square foot. The stadium is to be planted with real grass. The financially-troubled Kansas City Scouts are two months behind in their real payments to the city for use of the Komper Arena. League Team led second day qualifying for Sunday's Carolina 500 stock car race, guiding his Chevrolet at a speed of 133.647 mph to land the 16th starting position. A.J. Foyt, who has failed twice, gets his last qualifying chance today. California's horse-racing industry could face "a fight for survival" in the current labor dispute with janitors at strike-crippled Golden Gate Fields, two track officials told a state Assembly committee hearing Friday. An 11th-hour effort was under way Friday night to transfer the Minnesota Fighting Saints franchise in the World Hockey Association to two local investors. Texas A&M basketball coach Shelby Steele says he will encourage suspended players Karl Goldie and Jarvis Williams to remain at A&M. The pair have been suspended for the remainder of this year and all of next season by the Southwest Conference for allegedly accepting illegal financial benefits.

Trojans sign prep football star Moore

Ken Moore, quarterback-defensive back for the L.A. city championship San Fernando High School football team, Friday signed a national letter of intent with USC.

Moore's signing brought to 21 the number of USC prep and junior college recruits. The names of the other 20 had previously been published in the Independent, Press-Telegram.

Moore shared L.A. city player of the year honors with teammates Charles White and Kevin Williams, both of whom also have signed with USC.

WARD, POWELL, LEGASPI IN CIF WRESTLING FINALS

Poly High's Rodney Ward, Jeff Powell of Millikan and Bob Legaspi of Lakewood will carry the main Moore League hopes at the CIF Southern Section finals in wrestling today.

Competition begins at 10 a.m. at Marina High in Huntington Beach. Finals tonight are at 7.

Ward is undefeated in 23 matches at 151 pounds, Legaspi has lost only once at 141, while Powell was the Southern Section runner-up at 136 a year ago.

Athletes will be attempting to qualify for a spot at the State meet next Friday and Saturday at Cal Poly Pomona.

Jr. Wrestling

The Long Beach Junior league wrestling season for boys fifth-through ninth grade gets under way today at 2 p.m. with Wilson traveling to Millikan.

JCs open Long Beach Relays today

How strong are L.B. State spikers? SC will tell 'em

How talented is Long Beach State's track team?

USC will provide the answer today. USC, touted to tussle Texas El Paso and UCLA for the national championship, opens Olympic year against the 49ers, San Diego State and host UC Irvine today at noon.

"USC is a powerhouse," contends Long Beach coach Ron Alice. "No one can match SC's quality or quantity in the short races. Their only weakness is in the distances."

San Diego's crackerjacks are sprinter Harold Williams (9.3, 20.5), intermediate hurdler Quentin Wheeler (50.8) and sub-1:50 half-miler Odie Hoffman.

Irvine ranks among the top five NCAA Division II teams in the U.S.

THE LONG BEACH RELAYS commence today, 10:30 a.m., at L.B. State with junior college events.

Strong entries are expected from Long Beach, Cypress, Compton, Mira Costa, San Jose, Santa Ana, Rio Hondo, Santa Monica, L.A. City College, East L.A. and L.A. Southwest.

The Relays will continue next week-end.

A "JOG-A-THON" will be held on Sunday at L.B. State, 1 p.m.

There will be a clinic, Olympic-style pageantry and a jog for members of service clubs.

'Zubie baby' passes Hayden test

By DAVID LEVINSON

It had just been announced in New York and Los Angeles that in 1978 Zubin Mehta would become music director of the New York Philharmonic. The New York Times put its best musical minds to work on the story.

Harold Schonberg told the readers that Mehta was commonly believed to be weak in Haydn and Mozart but nifty in Richard Strauss, Arnold Schoenberg and today's avant-garde music. In general, the Timesman said, Mehta knows the standard symphony repertoire far better than Pierre Boulez, the current conductor of the New York Philharmonic. John Rockwell confided that, in contrast to the austere Boulez, Mehta is commonly known in Los Angeles as "Zubie baby."

THE Thursday night concert at the Music Center saw Mehta back on the Los Angeles Philharmonic podium for the first time since Jan. 4. There was an opportunity to test afresh at least part of Schonberg's report. The program was made up of Haydn's 83rd symphony, Morton Subotnick's brand-new "Before the Butterfly," and Beethoven's violin concerto.

Sure enough, the Haydn was brisk, clear and undistinguished. It is not Mehta's music, and while everything was in balance and there were no romantic swoops and glides, there was not much delicacy or nuance. But Mehta conducted it without score—a rare accomplishment for a work that is in one of the remotest corners of the standard repertoire.

Many conductors could make their way without a score in such a work, of course. All they'd have to do is memorize the major entrances of one section or another and keep the beat going. But Mehta had done more than that. He obviously knew every note.

HE CONDUCTED the Beethoven without score, too, and did just as well. That is a lesser accomplishment. But his share of the job was bolder and altogether more successful than the Haydn had been. The soloist was Ida Haendel, a Montreal violinist who got her early training and scored her early successes in Europe. This was her first Los Angeles appearance. She has a sweet, singing tone, and is clearly a first-rate musician. Her playing of the first movement was somewhat lacking in weight, though, and she took the concluding rondo at a slow pace that deprived it of exhilaration.

Mehta used a score for the Subotnick. Any conductor would have to. The work is extremely complex, and a conductor does a masterful job if he follows the score and gives all the cues. Mehta and the musicians gave the piece a confident, powerful reading.

"THIS IS the fifth and most recent of my works in the last four years to use the butterfly as a metaphor for the basis of the compositional procedures," Subotnick said in the program notes.

If the butterfly represents compositional procedures, the music can also be heard as representing the butterfly—or, in the case of the present work, as representing the moment before the butterfly emerges. This is literary music of a sort, but it is far removed from 19th century tone poems. Subotnick's music is not so much about butterflies as it is butterflies.

Subotnick's program notes, incidentally, are a marvel among those written by contemporary composers, who tend to provide highly intellectualized versions of the sort of drivel about "murmuring brooks" that high school music appreciation teachers once substituted for discussions of music. Subotnick tells us that the piece starts as "a slow evolution of the pitch G, expanding and contracting by quarter tones and gradually becoming large blocks of sound" that break up into a melody of sorts. In a second section, this "sea of G" dissolves into a chaos of rapid pulsation—another attempt of the butterfly to emerge. Finally the ideas of the first two sections are merged in "a suggestion of what the two together might 'become.'"

Even that description, and Subotnick's explanation of how loudness is regulated by violins equipped with microphones, is not likely to give a reader much idea of what the piece sounds like. But if you have a chance to hear it—there will be another performance at the Music Center Pavilion at 2:30 p.m. Sunday—I'd recommend it. It's only fair to add, though, that I detected only limited enthusiasm for the work on the part of Thursday's audience.

And then there was the woman who clicked out a tune on false teeth

By BOB PROTZMAN
Ridder News Service

ST. PAUL—Round and round the country he goes, and when Ted Mack will stop emceeing amateur talent shows nobody knows.

Mack, now 72, spent 23 years hosting the Original Amateur Hour on radio (1948 to 1960) and television (1948 to Sept. 30, 1970), and now he travels to college and university campuses and elsewhere participating in amateur talent shows.

Here recently to emcee an amateur talent show, said there have been some changes in his shows. "We do a kind of 'get the hook' thing now. Rather than a straight contest, we jazz it up for the people and have some fun."

Mack, who's seen "hundreds of thousands" of individuals and groups over his years of involvement with amateur talent, is proud of the fact that many of today's stars were Amateur Hour contestants.

"The American Guild of Variety Artists says that at least 40 per cent of its members were on the show," he said. He tried to recall some of the bigger names who had appeared on the show—Ann-Margret, George Carlin, Pat Boone, Greg Garrison (producer of Dean Martin's television show), Beverly Sills, Robert Merrill (2 Metropolitan Opera members were on the show, he said), and so many more, he gets tired of trying to recall them.

He likes to talk, too, about the ones who got away. "We threw Elvis Presley out of the auditions, because we thought his gyrations were too raunchy for a family audience," he recalled. "Tiny Tim auditioned 10 times, but we never let him on." He also recalled that Ann-Margret lost out in the competition to "a kid who played a tune on a laurel leaf."

Mack's often asked about the most absurd acts to audition or get on the show and he has as much difficulty naming those as he does recalling famous graduates, but he had a couple.

"There was a Hindu fakir who stuck a hatpin through his hand and longue and lay on a bed of glass, but he was not accepted for the show.

I asked our auditioning staff why and they replied, 'Cuz he bleeds like a stuck pig.' Then I remembered the old lady who was playing the fiddle. When she finished played, she took out her false teeth and started clicking out a tune on them and tap dancing to the music."

If Mack maintained his composure during that one, he could handle just about anything. And he apparently did, or the camera never caught him laughing at any of the performers, no matter how ridiculous the act. He is remembered by most, instead, as kindly and encouraging toward everyone. "Well, the kids were out there knocking themselves out, so it wasn't hard for me to be nice to them," he said.

The "original" Amateur Hour started on radio in 1935 and was hosted by Major Bowes, so the show had a lifespan of 35 years. In the 23 years that Mack hosted it, he had only six different sponsors, and one of those, Geritol, was with him for 13 seasons.

"We were on Sunday evenings toward the end and started getting hurt by football," Mack recalled. "The games would cut into our time slot. By the time the network decided to give us a different time and day, I wasn't interested."

Mack, acknowledging that there seems to be a tremendous interest now in amateur talent contests, said he doesn't know if he'd want to go back on the air with a show, although a number of independent producers have approached him about doing a show.

Meanwhile, Mack, who lives in Westchester County, N.Y., continues to travel around the country. "I'm still having a lot of fun," he said.

TEEVEE GUEST LIST

Two television favorites are guest starring in forthcoming TV movies. Barbara Parkins, late of "Peyton Place," plays a threatened prostitute in Quinn Martin's two-hour pilot, "The Deputies," for NBC.

David McCallum, of "The Man from U.N.C.L.E." and the late "Invisible Man," makes an appearance on the new Quinn Martin series, "Bert D'Angelo, Superstar," ABC-TV.

Andy Griffith has been signed to star in "For the People," a 90-minute ABC movie pilot that centers on a New York-based district attorney.

Gary Crosby has been set for a guest role in an upcoming segment of The Bionic Woman for ABC. He plays stage manager for a beauty contest who in reality is involved with an espionage ring.

But he wasn't told Radar lookout charges dropped

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

The Long Beach city prosecutor's office has dropped charges against Jimmy Dunn, the San Pedro man arrested for displaying a sign warning motorists of "Radar Ahead."

Dunn, however, was not pleased—mostly because nobody told him the charges had been dropped until he'd missed a day of work, sitting in court waiting vainly for his case to be called.

"Were it not for the fact that I have an arrest on my record, I'd pretty much be willing to call it a Mexican standoff," said Dunn.

"That, and that those (people) didn't tell me I didn't have to come to court this morning," he added.

Dunn was arrested last Monday afternoon at the foot of the Long Beach Freeway, on Sixth Street, for carrying a placard warning motorists of the presence of a police radar unit.

Police called that "interfering with an officer" and booked the 37-year-old commercial diver on that charge.

He coughed up $50—the price of a $500 bail bond—and rolled up his sleeves for a fight at his arraignment, scheduled Friday morning before Municipal Court Judge J. Merrill Lilley.

Soon after making bail, Dunn spent a morning at the local law library, researching his case and preparing a legal motion on his claim of false arrest.

He then headed for San Diego and a diving job scheduled to last the week, but on Thursday night he drove back to San Pedro. Friday morning, he showered, shaved, put on a suit and came to court.

He sat in the crowded courtroom and watched the crowd slowly disappear as the judge conducted a couple dozen arraignments. He was left in an empty gallery when the judge left the bench.

"They never called my name, so I had to go up to the bailiff and ask, 'Hey, is he done?' The bailiff said 'Yes.'"

So Dunn went downstairs to the records office where he learned the city prosecutor's office had declined to file charges against him.

City Prosecutor Robert Parkin explained, "meanwhile, that the complaint was rejected because 'just the act of holding up a sign is not interfering with an officer.'"

"You know," added Parkin, "you can make out a pretty good argument for the guy doing a public service, slowing down the traffic."

Later, a reporter calling Parkin for a comment on Dunn's court wait was left on "hold" for 15 minutes. The reason: Jimmy Dunn was on another line, bending Parkin's ear.

"I apologized to him for the fact that he had to come in," said

Parkin. "He's right and he may have a point that he wasn't notified..."

Parkin said that notifying arrested persons that no charges are being filed is "just one of those things that nobody does" as each case is processed through police and prosecutor to court.

Frequently in such cases, Parkin said, bail bondsmen pass the word. And Dunn acknowledged that, for at least part of the week, no one was at his home to receive the news.

"Considering the volume of cases that come through here, the number of people who suffer what Mr. Dunn did is very small," said Parkin.

Earlier, Dunn said he still was considering consulting an attorney to see if any record of the arrest could be erased. "It's the old story," he said, "of 'don't tread on me if you don't want to get bit on the leg.'"

Judge change requested in Dr. Cella trial

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr. and two former administrators of hospitals he controlled sought Friday to disqualify Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Jerrold L. Oliver from presiding at their trial on 127 counts each in an indictment by the Orange County Grand Jury.

Cella and three other men—Theodore Schiffman, 53, his business manager; Stephen R. Evans, 31, and George Ollendorf, 44—are accused in identical charges that they siphoned almost $2 million from Mission Community Hospital at Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana.

Schiffman refused to join in the challenge of the judge.

That was the procedure followed when County Supervisor Robert Battin challenged Judge Kenneth Lae's ability to remain unbiased in hearing seven grand-jury charges against him.

Another judge considered the defense claims of bias and prejudice and ruled that Lae could sit on the case without injuring the defendant's right to a fair trial.

Lae now is presiding over a lengthy pretrial hearing in which Battin is seeking dismissal of charges that he used his county-paid staff in an unsuccessful campaign to get the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

CELLA, who became known in 1974 as the state's major political benefactor, has said he invested about $500,000 in political races.

Battin received some of Cella's largesse—which the grand jury said came from falsified records, bills and collections involving the two hospitals.

Oliver agreed to a defense motion that the grand jury's transcripts should remain at least temporarily sealed. He said he would hear arguments on a motion to permanently seal the records on March 22.

Tom Crosby, attorney for Schiffman, said his client might want to call Oliver as a witness during the trial.

He did not explain how that could be accomplished if Oliver is presiding over the case.

THE OTHER defendants contend that Oliver is biased, citing his contributions to Republican political candidates and friendship with Orange County Dist. Atty. Cecil Hicks.

Cella, a registered Republican, contributed heavily to various political campaigns—including those of many Democrats—during 1974.

He and Hicks have publicly been at odds on many occasions, and Hicks conducted an investigation into Cella's affairs after charging that the doctor headed "a shadow government" controlling Orange County.

Oliver said he considered the disqualification motion "ambiguous" but would not immediately rule on it "because it would not be seemly to do so."

He added that he would refer the issue to another judge.

LBCEO receives new grant for 6 programs

A six-month progress report by new Director Bud Weisbart and an outline of a community-needs survey have been presented to the board of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunity.

Weisbart said the commission was operating on an overall 10 per cent administrative overhead and has secured in the past six months $310,854 in increased funds for six programs. These are two nutrition programs, family planning, Head Start, manpower and energy conservation.

In addition, he said, an annual report of individuals helped by the commission's services through November 1975 included emergency assistance, 3,039; ex-law offenders, 490; Head Start, 80; health care, 11,293; housing assistance, 528; manpower, 10,966; American Indians, 245; senior citizens, 35,068; transportation, 4,018, and youth, 2,389.

The survey, headed by staff member Mike Guichard, is being conducted by eight Long Beach State University students making random samples of low-income families in five geographical areas of the city. The object of the survey is to provide a base upon which agency priorities may be established.

Questions include the adequacy and availability of health care, emergency services, housing, recreation, child care and job counseling and training.

Westside sampling has been completed, the downtown area is 80 per cent complete, the eastside 60 per cent finished and the entire survey is scheduled to be completed in March.

In other matters, the board heard a request for clearance of $9,000 needed to carry the North Long Beach Neighborhood Center's Daymon House rehabilitation project through next June. It was referred to committees. A report is due at the next meeting of the group in March.

Skies were sunny and the high temperature was 76 in Long Beach Friday, making it perfect weather for this

Gold compounds still best for arthritis

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Gold compounds remain the best medications available for rheumatoid arthritis, a medical specialist says.

Gold therapy, not a new treatment, was recommended during a lecture to doctors at Long Beach Community Hospital.

Dr. James G. Gitlin, a rheumatologist of Huntington Beach, said that other medications reduce pain and inflammation.

But gold induces remissions (symptom abatement) and prevents further damage to joints, Gitlin said. In addition, it can promote healing of erosive changes in the joint area.

Rheumatoid arthritis is a chronic disorder characterized by joint inflammation and resulting in deterioration of certain joint structures.

Gitlin said gold is administered by intramuscular injection. It is a long-term treatment and begins with an injection every week for the first 20 weeks.

He cautioned that gold compounds should be administered only by physicians who have had "experience in using this form of treatment." Gold therapy can cause toxic reactions in many patients.

Gitlin, who is affiliated with the department of rheumatology at UC Irvine College of Medicine, noted there was no cure for rheumatoid arthritis at present but added:

"There are enough forms of therapy to control the disease in a majority of patients."

One new drug to combat pain and inflammation is due for release

next month, he said. He identified it as naproxen. The drug is known in other countries as Naprosyn.

But he warned that the new drug "won't be a cure."

In fact, he said, there won't be a cure until the cause is known.

"The puzzle has not yet been put together," he remarked.

Gitlin said that $400 million was spent annually on quack devices and drugs. It would be helpful if that same money could be directed into medical research activity, he added.

As of now, there are 20 million arthritides requiring care. Ten per cent of the U. S. population is affected by some form of a rheumatic disorder.

Arthritis is not a single disorder, he reminded. There are 80 to 100 rheumatic diseases that may cause arthritis.

Aspirin remains a highly beneficial drug to treat arthritis, he said. Many patients take up to 30 aspirin a day for several years with no side effects whatever.

For reasons not understood, arthritides who take lots of aspirin don't suffer as many side effects from the drug as might be expected, Gitlin said.

Carmelitos housing site called remnant of past

Carmelitos Housing Project is "a remnant of the past" and should be redeveloped into a mix of low, moderate and senior-citizen housing which blends with the surrounding area, according to the League of Women Voters of Long Beach.

Mrs. Ina Aronow, league president, said the league has urged the Los Angeles County Housing Authority to follow such a plan, and also to use federal programs to rehouse some Carmelitos tenants in scattered subsidized units.

"The City of Long Beach has been quite successful at administering scattered site assisted housing and can easily expand this program to house part of the Carmelitos population," Mrs. Aronow said in a letter which will be on the City Council agenda Tuesday.

Through studies by the League of Women Voters, she said, it was found that inadequate housing is one of the basic causes of social unrest.

Downtown group reelects Neighbors

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Long-time civic leader Darrell Neighbors, who in the 1950s led the city's fight against subsidence, has been reelected chairman of the Project Area Committee for Long Beach's downtown redevelopment project.

President of Jotham Bixby Co. and secretary-treasurer of the Bixby Land Co., he has been in business in the downtown area since 1929 and terms its planned revitalization his "most challenging pursuit yet."

Wheeler Abbeft, owner of Peppermint Pushcard Florist, 19 Long Beach Blvd., was retained as vice chairman of the 21-member citizens' committee.

Robert Smythe, newly elected PAC member, was named secretary-treasurer, filling the vacancy left by Robert A. Wenzel, who in April will retire as vice president and manager of United California Bank, a position which Smythe will assume.

Reelected to represent residents in the project area were Otto Beck, 600 E. Ocean Blvd.; Jack Jacobs, 666 E. Ocean Blvd.; and Archie Miller, 206 Long Beach Blvd. Elected as a new residential member was Larry Lana, 666 E. Ocean Blvd.

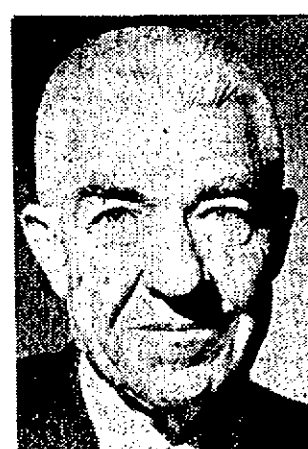

In addition to Smythe, those named to represent businesses in the downtown area were Murray Kramer, realtor; Robert Baird, manager of the Ocean Centers Building; Joyce Johnson, owner of Unique and Obsolete, 131 E. Fourth St.; and Donovan Rodman, Rodman Realty, 22 Elm Ave. The latter two were re-elected.

Also reelected were the Rev. Bruce V. Talbert, First Congregational Church, and Douglas Ben-

well, representing Downtown Long Beach Associates.

In addition to Abbeft and Neighbors, those remaining on the committee by virtue of their two-year terms include Mrs. Norma L. Bratt, 666 E. Ocean Blvd., and Mrs. Allie Drazanovich, 141 Elm Ave., representing residents; Dwight E. Bennett, Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, and Bonnie Helton, Free Enterprise Association, representing associations.

Also, Ben F. Marron, realtor, 400 E. First St.; William K. Rapp, Bill Rapp's Chevron Station, 300 W. Ocean Blvd.; James B. Russell Jr., a partner in Pray, Price, Williams & Russell, 555 E. 30 SOUGHT TO AUDITION FOR PLAY

Thirty actors and actresses, including two small children with acrobatic skills, are being sought by Long Beach's Ha'Penny Players for their upcoming production of "The Flying Prince."

Auditions will be held Monday and Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Recreation Center, 350 E. Ocean Blvd.

Rehearsals for the play, the Recreation Department's major spring production, will begin March 8 under the direction of Dave Barton. Seven performances will be staged between May 7 and 22, Barton said.

Barton described "The Flying Prince," written by Aundred Harris, as a classic East Indian legend. He said he was looking for actors between 16 and 65 and actresses from 14 through 25.

There are no singing roles in "The Flying Prince," in contrast to earlier Ha'Penny Players productions of "Cinderella" and "Oliver," but there are numerous dance sequences, which will be choreographed by Albert Ruiz.

Barton said special auditions would be held later for dancers.

Nevertheless, he said, the often uncoordinated efforts of the vast health care indus-McNerney said that health care now costs $120 billion a year, but that "we could double that and not make a major impact on some of the key health indices" by continuing existing methods.

Blue Cross, he said, already has a contract from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to examine its records in search of clues to occupational causes of disease. But, he said,

McNerney said it is hospitals must cooperate by beginning to ask more searching questions about possible occupational hazards.

He indicated that considerable effort may be mispent in research for the causes of illnesses that may have obvious but overlooked relationships to the three areas mentioned.

WEEK'S TRANSACTIONS

The building covers six acres, much of it a warehouse stocked with more than $3.5 million in parts. A computer system keeps track of the parts on hand, plus monitoring the car inventories of dealers. The region functions as the final link in a supply pipeline that begins several thousand miles away in Japan.

In addition to serving as headquarters for regional sales executives, the office also houses a mechanics training center and is the home base for Datsun's Mobile Training Center, a van that travels the territory to instruct technicians on servicing techniques.

The office has 99 employees, headed by Ben Machinist, regional manager. It is located at 1833 Sunflower Avenue in Costa Mesa and replaces an older building in Gardena.
